

REFERENDUM NOW
PROPOSED FOR LYNN
CROSSING PROBLEMS

Two Amendments to the Wadleigh Bill Are Submitted at Hearing Before Joint Committee.

OTHER OPPOSITION

P. B. Magrane, the City's Heaviest Individual Taxpayer, Gives His Objections to Depression Scheme.

Two amendments to the Wadleigh bill, which provides for paying the Boston & Maine railroad the cost thus far incurred in elevating the tracks through the city, providing the railroad removes them and depresses the tracks, were presented to the committee on railroads at the State House today by Lynn M. Ranger, a member of the committee that framed Lynn's new charter.

Mr. Ranger said he believed the city of Lynn should at this time establish a precedent that no extraordinary bond issue of such size should be voted till the project had passed a popular referendum, that is placed on the ballot and approved by a majority of those voting.

Amendment number one provides that the Legislature shall submit the proposition in its final form to the voters of the city of Lynn at a special election to be called within 15 days. Number 1 B requires the acceptance of the act by the municipal council of the city of Lynn and such acceptance is subject to the provisions of the new city charter relative to the referendum, whereby a number of voters equal to 25 per cent of the number voting for mayor at the last election may demand a submission of the matter to the people.

Amendment No. 2 provides that if the first plan presented to the city of Lynn is rejected by said city, the railroad company may within 60 days secure the approval of the state railroad commissioners to submit a substitute plan to the voters of Lynn at a special election, the railroad to pay the cost of such election.

P. B. Magrane, Lynn's largest taxpayer, quoted figures showing the heavy expenses of the city, present and contemplated, and protested against any move that would tend to increase the tax rate.

Among the other speakers in opposition to the Wadleigh bill were former Mayor Besson and George M. Lambert. The hearing adjourned at 1 o'clock and will meet again tomorrow at 10:30, when City Solicitor Arthur C. Wadleigh of Lynn, who framed the bill, will be heard in rebuttal, the date being the close of the hearing of the opposition.

BOSTON BUSINESS
MEN PLAN HONOR
FOR MR. MCCARTHY

Boston business men are going to give a dinner to Jeremiah J. McCarthy, surveyor of the port, in recognition of his 12 years of service as surveyor. He retires June 1 at his own request. He has been asked to name a date for the dinner.

After Mr. McCarthy had informally received the delegation which brought him the invitation, Charles H. Crump, of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe, said:

"We have come here to pay a tribute to our surveyor. It is with regret that we part with his services here in Boston. He has filled the office to the satisfaction of all without a stain."

Collector Curtis then said: "I can say that Surveyor McCarthy should be proud of the endorsement he has received from Boston's business men that have signed this request. The names are of the representative merchants of Boston. Any man who has served 12 years in his position and has retained the friendship of all should feel proud."

LEGISLATURE MEETS IN JOINT CONVENTION
TO ELECT SECRETARY

President Treadway of Senate Calls the Two Branches to Order to Ballot for Successor to Colonel Olin.

REPUBLICANS SURE

Say That Representative Albert P. Langtry, Their Nominee, Will Receive Substantial Majority.

Assembled in joint convention in the house of representatives, the two branches of the Legislature were called together this afternoon by President Treadway of the Senate, to ballot for a secretary of state, to succeed Col. William M. Olin.

The names of Representative Albert P. Langtry of Springfield and Frank J. Donahue of Boston were presented to the convention as the respective candidates of the Republican and Democratic parties.

The Republican leaders were confident prior to assembling in convention, it was said, that Mr. Langtry would be chosen by a substantial majority. They anticipated opposition from the Democrats to the proposal to use the open ballot method of voting, used by presidential electors.

They felt assured, however, that the Democrats could not win to their point of view a sufficient number of Republicans to get a majority vote in favor of a secret ballot.

It is claimed by Republican members that as 144 Republican legislators attended the caucus which nominated Mr. Langtry Tuesday, thereby binding themselves to vote for him in the convention, and as only 141 votes will be necessary for a choice with all the legislators present and voting today, Mr. Langtry cannot fail of election unless an unusual number of Republicans absent themselves or party promises are broken.

Of the nine Republicans who did not attend Tuesday's caucus, several, including Senator Tinkham and Representatives Saunders and Norwood, will be present today and vote for Representative Langtry, it is said. With these friendly absentees of yesterday present it is claimed by Mr. Langtry's lieutenants that his election is clinched.

With all members of both branches at the convention there would be 133 Republicans, 126 Democrats and one Socialist, a total of 260. A majority vote of 141 is necessary to elect.

Herbert Parker, former attorney-general, appeared before the joint convention, appeared before the joint convention.

BUSINESS MANAGER
OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS
URGED BY GOVERNOR

Governor Foss urges that a capable business manager or superintendent of buildings and grounds be placed in charge of the superintendence and operation of the State House, leaving the sergeant-at-arms free to devote his entire time to the legislative service, in the message sent to the Legislature this afternoon.

This should be done for the sake of economy, the Governor says, and adds that he believes that such a manager would be able to cut down the running expenses at the State House by $45,000 within the first year of his service.

The appropriations for the current running expenses of the State House, totaling $214,880, are greatly in excess of the amount which would be required under good business management, he says, and quotes figures to prove this from the report on the State House submitted to him today by H. L. Coe, expert accountant.

PROSPECT OF PEACE
IN MEXICO GROWING
BRIGHTER EACH DAY

WASHINGTON—Prospects of peace are better today than ever. The revolutionary leaders are working systematically to that end and reports which reach the state department from Mexico show renewed assurance that hostilities will shortly cease.

This message came to the state department from Thomas D. Edwards, United States consul at Ciudad Juarez.

"All is quiet in military circles in Juarez and it is the general belief that the war is ended. At the camp of the insurgents, which is only four miles out, the same opinion prevails. Americans who have been with the insurgents are quietly crossing to the United States to remain. Perfect harmony only prevails among the leaders of the insurgents and good order in their camp, and that they will abide by the agreement of the peace commission is the general opinion."

REPUBLICANS DEFY
PROGRESSIVES AS

WASHINGTON—Progressive Republicans in the Senate agreed today to meet tonight and decide whether they should carry their contest with the regulars over committee assignments to the floor of the Senate when it meets on Thursday.

Just before the Republican caucus assembled at 3 o'clock this afternoon it was said that approval of the committee lists as prepared by the committee on committees meant a division in the ranks.

DEALERS PROTEST
FOOD COVERING
UPON SATURDAYS

About 50 marketmen appeared before the board of health today at a special hearing and asked that the board's regulation requiring the keeping of all food-stuffs protected from dust be not applied to Saturday afternoons and evenings.

The marketmen claim that trade is so brisk on Saturday that it is impossible to provide adequate service to the rush of customers if a case has to be uncovered with every sale. They say they are perfectly willing to obey the regulation on other days.

Daniel B. Sweeney, a Clinton street marketman, said that enforcement of the regulation upon Saturday would indicate the need of a revision of the city charter to call for election of health commissioners by the people instead of by appointment by the Mayor.

The protest was taken under advisement, and a decision will be rendered by the board within a few days.

Start Made in $45,000 Campaign Sends Clock Register's Hands Around One-Third of the Dial in a Day.

ABLE COOPERATION

Assurance that the Melrose Y. M. C. A. will realize the $45,000 desired to be raised in its eight-day campaign seems to be indicated by the reports of the team captains after the first day's work submitted at the supper to the workers in Association hall Tuesday night, when pledges aggregating $14,917 were announced.

The hand of the clock opposite city hall, by which the amounts raised from day to day are to be indicated is one third of the way on its journey around the dial.

Many of the workers in the Melrose campaign have participated in some of the other recent campaigns in neighboring cities and are familiar with the method of procedure. Among them are Franklin P. Shumway, who took a prominent part in the Boston Y. M. C. A. campaign; Edwin K. Smith, A. B. Franklin, Charles C. Barry, J. C. F. Stanton and Charles M. Cox, all of whom are now members of the executive committee and residents of Melrose. They have the able assistance of State Secretary E. W. Hearne and Field Secretary Fred S. Shepard.

The Melrose campaign is the eighth in this state, none of which has failed to secure the amounts started after. The campaigns and amounts raised previously are: Abington, $4500 in two days; Beverly, $83,003.47 in five days; Boston, $514,624.18 in 15 days; Cambridge, $151,000 in 11 days; Chelsea, $71,826 in 10 days; Fall River, $55,956 in eight days; Franklin, $31,269 in 10 days; Lawrence, $156,680.60 in 10 days; Lowell, $174,557 in 10 days; Malden, $60,000 in 10 days; Marblehead, $16,795.65; Milton, $20,000; Newton, $156,890.05 in six days; Quincy, $27,160 in nine days; Somerville, $44,667.50; Taunton, $40,918 in seven days; Wakefield, $14,000 in 10 days.

This makes a total amount of $1,623,908.41 raised by 17 of the state associations with 3680 workers and 36,559 contributors.

WALTHAM SITE
IS ANNOUNCED

WALTHAM, Mass.—Selection of the site for the new main postoffice structure was announced today in a communication from Congressman Wilder received by Charles J. Shepard, the postmaster.

The property at Moody and Pine streets, with a frontage of 126 feet on the former and a depth of 146 feet, is the choice at a cost of $46,051. The architectural office at Washington has so much work on hand according to the communication that it is likely to be three years before the structure is completed.

The property is owned by Mrs. Josephine E. Farmer and John H. Lincoln, comprising two building lots. The buildings on the property are one-story wooden structures. There were seven other properties offered.

The appropriation for the purchase of the site and erection of the building is $115,000, leaving about $69,000 for construction.

DR. SNEDDEN URGES
ADAPTING STUDIES TO THE BENT OF PUPILS

Plans for more efficient work in the public schools, especially in the grades below the high school, which were prepared by David Snedden, state commissioner of education, are being urged by him upon the schools throughout the state.

Dr. Snedden favors the adaptation of the school work and curriculum to the needs of the pupils, giving opportunity to boys and girls to take at the beginning of their seventh year in school the kind of studies which will lead to those for which each pupil is best adapted.

Up to the seventh grade Dr. Snedden would have all children take the same subjects and the same amount and kind of work, and at the beginning of the seventh year he would divide the work into four branches, all leading to a common end.

FRANCONIA, NEARING
PORT, LARGEST SHIP
EVER DOCKED HERE

Installation of the New Service Brings London and Boston a Day's Journey Closer Together.

INVITATION DINNER

Federal, State and City Officials, Traffic Managers and Boston Merchants Among the Guests.

Charles Stewart, manager of the local office of the Cunard line, said today that the new Cunard liner Franconia will reach quarantine about 8:30 p. m. today, according to the latest wireless report, and will proceed up to her dock at East Boston at 7 a. m.

Formal installation of the Franconia as a permanent addition to the Boston service, marks a very important step in the development of Boston over sea commerce, as London will thereby be a full day nearer Boston than ever before.

A considerable saving in time is accomplished by the fact that the Franconia is not only the largest and fastest steamship in the Boston service, but will land passengers at Fishguard, the landing point for the Lusitania and Mauretania, which sail from New York, instead of at Liverpool, as do the Ivernia and Saxonia.

This will enable passengers leaving Boston Tuesday to land the following week on Wednesday at Fishguard, arriving in London Wednesday afternoon. At present, via Liverpool, Boston passengers arrive in London Thursday afternoon, a full 24 hours later than will be the case under the new regime now inaugurated by the Cunard company.

With the addition of the Laconia, the sister ship of the Franconia, to the Boston service in March next, Boston will have two large, fast, new steamers plying between this port and Europe, with capacity of 5000 passengers each per month. The Laconia will make its first sailing from Boston March 12, 1912.

Arrangements have been made with the Boston Tow Boat Company by which a tug will be at the disposal of Mr. Stewart this evening, and he will go down the harbor to meet the Franconia, accompanied by representatives of the press.

Some of the foremost citizens of Boston and vicinity are to be present at 7 p. m. Thursday at a banquet to be given by the Cunard line on the new steamer at her East Boston berth.

The principal speakers will be Governor Foss, Mayor Fitzgerald, Edwin U. Curtis, collector of the port; Charles Stewart, manager of the local office of the Cunard line; Timothy E. Byrnes, vice-president of the New Haven railroad; George S. Smith, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and Robert Lincoln O'Brien.

The topic under discussion will be the "Shipping Trade of Boston and the Development of Its Harbor."

Among other guests will be Col. George B. Billings, Captain Coffman, commandant of the navy yard, Col. R. H. Patterson of Ft. Banks, George E. Smith of the harbor commission, W. P. Hall of the railroad commission, Grahame Houghton, president of the Victorian Club, A. W. Preston of the United Fruit Company, Bryce Allan of the Allan line, John H. Thomas of the White

GRAND TRUNK SHIFTS
ITS NEW ENGLAND
CONTEST TO BOSTON

Order Introduced in Lower Branch of Legislature Inviting It to Make Its Terminal at This Port.

CONFERENCE IS ON

Mr. Mellen and Mr. Byrnes of the New Haven Hold Important Meeting at the North Station.

It appeared today that Boston had suddenly become the center of railroad activity in New England, and while Charles S. Mellen, president, and Timothy E. Byrnes, vice-president of the New Haven and Boston & Maine lines, were in conference at the North station, and while an order was being introduced in the Legislature inviting the Grand Trunk to enter Boston, the assembly meeting at the American house requested the Chamber of Commerce to act upon the invitation to the Grand Trunk.

The Grand Trunk seeks a new terminal in New England and it is said to regard the port of Boston as preferable to all others. C. M. Hays, the president, has indicated that he would not be averse to coming here. He has also said that he would not consider Providence, R. I., unless he was allowed certain trackage rights.

The Rhode Island Legislature has delivered an ultimatum to the Grand Trunk and the New Haven, the competing lines, giving them 48 hours in which to reach some agreement.

The New England Dry Goods Association at its meeting on Tuesday evening approved a motion endorsing the movement to induce the Grand Trunk to build a line to Boston.

The order inviting the Grand Trunk railroad to extend its lines to the port of Boston was offered in the House by John F. Meaney of Blackstone and laid

ARBITRATION BOARD
REPORTS INCREASING
INDUSTRIAL CONCORD

The twenty-fifth annual report of the state board of conciliation and arbitration relative to its work in the year 1910 says:

"By the trade agreement the competent employee's tenure of work is secure, and he is confident that no change in the methods of business will leave him an outcast through any neglect of consideration."

"Further amendment to the management of business by adding to it a department for the maintenance of labor relations is a consummation devoutly to be wished."

"There are in this state hundreds of standing agreements between parties, and the adjustments made by the contracting parties greatly exceed in number those which become matters of public record."

"The year just passed has witnessed matters jointly submitted to state arbitration in pursuance of agreement in a larger number than ever before."

"The number of petitions for arbitration which the board had under consideration is 208, of which 197 were filed in the year just passed, four have not been decided and 23 of the controversies were settled in some other way, while 181 controversies were heard and determined in 165 decisions, controversies between the same parties having been grouped when expedient."

GRAND TRUNK SHIFTS ITS NEW ENGLAND CONTEST TO BOSTON

over until Thursday at his request. The order is as follows:

"Whereas the entry of the Grand Trunk railroad system to the port of Boston would be greatly to the commercial advantage of Massachusetts, therefore be it

"Ordered that we, the Massachusetts House of Representatives, do hereby join in inviting the Grand Trunk railroad to extend its lines to Boston, and

"Ordered that copies of this order be forwarded to the directors of the Grand Trunk railroad."

Contest at Providence

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—It is evident today as the Legislature draws to a close that the contest between the Grand Trunk and New Haven railroad is to be urged to a decision of some kind.

Representatives of both roads met at the capitol on Tuesday with the members of the house committee on corporations before which for a week there has been under consideration a proposed amendment to the charter of the Southern New England railroad. Over this road from Palmer, Mass., to Providence the Grand Trunk proposed to extend its lines.

The Grand Trunk desires the additional right to locate a terminal at tide-water in the limits of this city and near to an extensive state and municipal dock for which Providence has just secured the water front at a cost of $80,000. For many years the New York, New Haven & Hartford has controlled this particular water front or at least the natural entrance thereto from their main lines.

Over this entrance the Grand Trunk sought a right of way. This was strongly opposed by E. G. Buckland, vice-president, and Nathaniel Smith, attorney on behalf of C. S. Mellen, and as persistently urged by John S. Murdoch, who has been making the fight here for the Grand Trunk's entrance in Rhode Island and Narragansett bay.

Representatives of the railroads were told by the legislators that an agreement of some character would be expected of them before the next 48 hours had elapsed and that the desire was to permit the Grand Trunk to enter and enjoy proper tidewater privileges.

The Grand Trunk representative insisted on the use of the New Haven tracks in the vicinity of Roger Williams park and along the water front, locally known as Allens avenue. The Grand Trunk all the while proposed that an adequate compensation should be paid for the joint use of the New Haven road's track. This was opposed by Mr. Buckland of the New Haven because of the grade crossings which would be created by the entrance of the Grand Trunk.

It is said that the committee will frame an amendment comprising a plan which grants to the Grand Trunk about all it has been contending for, in addition to the original southern New England charter.

Such action is sure of a contest to a finish in both branches of the Assembly and a possible blocking of the amendment by the Senate in the final hours, which are fast approaching.

The lobby about the State House was never so powerful and resourceful as now and the agents of the New Haven are alert in anticipation of new moves by the Grand Trunk.

Two prominent senators expressed the opinion that the New Haven-Boston & Albany-New York Central agreement would prevent Grand Trunk success in Rhode Island.

Harvard University announces the following summer courses in fine arts:

Denman Waldo Ross, Ph. D., will give 24 lectures on "The Principles of Pure Design and Representation." This course is intended for students, for professional teachers and painters, for teachers of drawing and painting, and for teachers of the history of art. In connection with this course practice in pure design will be carried on under the supervision of Edgar O. Parker and Dr. Ross, and practice in representation under Martin Mower in consultation with Dr. Ross.

A second course on "The Sculpture and Painting of the Italian Renaissance," with illustrated lectures, reading and visits to the museums will be conducted by Chandler Rathjorn Post, Ph. D., instructor in Greek and in fine arts. The purpose of this course is to study the great cultural period of the early Italian Renaissance, with its chief manifestations in political history, religious and intellectual tendencies, manners, the fine arts and literature, and to discuss the bearing of Italian culture in the Renaissance on modern art and life.

A third course will be given in London, Eng., by Asst. Prof. Arthur Pope on "Turner and the Landscape Painting of His Time," with lectures, conferences, visits to galleries and reports. The chief aim will be a study of the works of Turner in the galleries in and near London, together with a study of his environment and development. One day each week will be taken for the study of other paintings, the course including a survey of the main characteristics of the principal European schools of painting.

mittees on labor and public health today in opposition to the bill presented by the special commission on the revision of the factory inspection laws.

"The report of the commission was clearly, incisively and temperately analyzed by J. T. Auerbach in opposing the bill," said Mr. Parker. "The commission found that the present system is inadequate, but not incompetent. From the ruins of a partially efficient system we are asked to construct an entirely new and different system. The report is utterly inconsequential in its conclusion, and the bill presented by the commission would four-fold confound the present confusion."

The bill to change the district over which the Lynn police court shall have jurisdiction came down from the Senate, the question being on passing it to be engrossed. The House having refused to concur with the Senate in a recommission to the committee on public safety.

Mr. Hobbs of Worcester moved that the bill be recommitted to the committee on judiciary. The House, however, refused to recommit the bill, and it was passed to be engrossed. Mr. Hurd of Salem immediately gave notice of an intention to move reconsideration tomorrow.

Tech Bill Goes Over

In the House today Representative Hathaway of New Bedford filed his own petition for legislation providing that the school committee in New Bedford shall consist of the mayor and six others. The bill authorizing the towns of Reading and Wakefield to supply each other with gas and electricity was passed to be engrossed under suspension of the rules.

Mr. Newton of Boston moved to postpone until tomorrow consideration of the resolve in favor of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, stating that inasmuch as Governor Foss has objected to the appropriation for the Massachusetts Agricultural College he desired to learn the Governor's attitude toward this bill before acting on it, in order to save a possible veto. After some discussion the resolve was then ordered to a third reading with debate, with the understanding that the contest, if there is to be one, will come on the next stage.

The bill giving greater local control over the granting of trolley freight franchises was passed to be engrossed.

of the party. Some of the Democrats likewise are dissatisfied with the assignments given to them by the minority steering committee.

The regular Republicans insisted as they entered the caucus that they had taken good care of the insurgents and that there was no chance for the overturning of the program so as to place Senator LaFollette on the interstate commerce committee. Cummins on finance and Bristow on foreign relations, which were the points of difference which caused the greatest trouble.

Insurgent Republicans charge that the regulars are packing the finance and interstate commerce committees, the first named to prevent assaults upon the Payne-Aldrich bill and the principle of high protection, and the latter to keep railroad legislation out of the hands of insurgents who they claim have made studies of this subject.

In spite of diligent efforts to prevent the disclosure of the assignments agreed upon by the committee on committees, the interest in the more important places was so great that most of them became known. The majority membership of the great committee follows:

Appropriations—Warren of Wyoming, chairman; Perkins, California; Gallinger, New Hampshire; Curtis, Kansas; Gamble, South Dakota; Smoot, Utah; Wetmore, Rhode Island; Dixon, Montana, and probably Bourne, Oregon.

Finance—Penrose, Pennsylvania, chairman; Cullom, Illinois; Lodge, Massachusetts; McCumber, North Dakota; Smoot, Utah; Gallinger, New Hampshire; Clark, Wyoming; Heyburn, Idaho; and La Follette, Wisconsin. The minority members of this committee, which has charge of all tariff bills, will be as follows: Bailey, Texas; Simmons, North Carolina; Stone, Missouri; Kern, Indiana; Williams, Mississippi; and Johnson, Maine.

Foreign relations—Cullom, Illinois, chairman; Frye, Maine; Lodge, Massachusetts; Smith, Michigan; Root, New York; Borah, Idaho; Burton, Ohio; Sutherland, Utah, and one place to be filled. Interstate commerce—Clapp, Minnesota, chairman; Cullom, Illinois; Crane, Massachusetts; Nixon, Nevada; Cummins, Iowa; Oliver, Pennsylvania; Townsend, Michigan; and Lippitt, Rhode Island.

RAILROAD BOARD INSPECTS SYSTEM

The railroad commissioners began their annual tour of inspection of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad system today. A special train bearing the three commissioners and a party of officials of the road left South station shortly after 8 a. m. for Cape Cod, where two or three days are to be spent in inspecting the several lines.

after the adoption of a perfecting amendment offered by Mr. Ellis of Newton.

Mr. Conway of Boston moved to substitute for an adverse report a bill providing that hearings before the licensing board in Boston shall be open to the public.

Mr. Leonard of Boston opposed the bill, stating that hearings are now public except to newspapermen, and arguing that no advantage would be gained by newspaper publicity. The motion to substitute failed on a rising vote, 46 to 54, and on a roll-call, 73 to 125.

Hearing Postponed

The House committee on ways and means, on the petition of Mayor Fitzgerald which provides that the licensing board of the city of Boston be authorized to dispose of certain licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors by public auction, postponed a hearing until next Monday.

NEW PROBLEMS, OLD RULES

English Friend of the Colonies Described by John Hunter Sedgwick.

IN the seventh series, volume 6 of the collection of the Massachusetts Historical Society, containing part of the Bowdoin and Temple papers, is found a letter from Gov. Thomas Pownall to James Bowdoin. We shall transcribe a good part of it, as it gives us a view of an enlightened English statesman at the time of the American revolution such as is not always given to those who are learning or is chosen by those who ought to have learned the history, or some part of it, of the United States. Pownall himself is well enough known to historians and publicists, but the public probably overlook the fact that he was a staunch friend to the American colonies, though he was a member of Parliament, and boldly advocated their independence. He was as well a man of very advanced political views, and on what is now virtually a question of world-politics he held opinions which today are but repeated by those who believe in a close and practical friendship between the United States and the other English-speaking nations. Indeed, it is said that when the independence of the American colonies became a fact he declared himself disappointed of what had been his dream—"a consolidated English-speaking empire." Whether this would have been a practical thing is a question that is now removed from the necessity of an answer, but that Pownall should have the conception shows his breadth of political view. Like most men that think ahead of "practical politics" he saw his ways go unheeded by those whom they were meant to impress, but his example is valuable none the less, as a link in the chain of national political understanding that must subsist between the English-speaking nations.

The Bowdoin and Temple papers were bequeathed to the Massachusetts Historical Society by the Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, an associate, and of these we are concerned today with one written by Governor Pownall to James Bowdoin dated the 28th of February, 1783. It may be convenient to remember that Thomas Pownall was born in Lincoln, England, in 1720, left England in 1760 and passed away at Bath in 1805. Thus his years spanned the period when were laid the foundations of the great development in popular government that took place in the nineteenth century. The letter begins thus:

"My old friend,—Permit me through you to congratulate the State Massachusetts-Bay on the establishment of its Sovereignty in Political Freedom; & may I beg of you to render acceptable to the State & citizens the congratulations of an old Governor (Ultimus Anglorum according to charter). This address arises from old friendship to that people, mixt with the profoundest reverence for the State; & I wish to express this sense in the most marked terms of respect."

We can understand his words if we remember that Pownall was made Governor of Massachusetts in 1766 and served in that capacity for four years. When he was appointed he had already been in the county since 1753, and this fact, together with his official experience and a great sympathy with the country, made him very well versed in American affairs.

He continues the letter by saying, "I consider this wonderful Revolution as the visible interposition of Divine Providence, superceding the ordinary Course of human affairs; after a quotation from Virgil, he says, 'I mean most certainly to come & see the country in its sovereignty & freedom. It will be a sight worth travelling to see.'"

To see the commencement of a great empire at its first foundation is an object that no other period, no other part of the world ever since it was a world, could exhibit; it is an object more worthy the contemplation of a speculative philosopher than can be or ever can be seen in any other country."

The writer goes on to say that he hopes soon to make this journey to America, and broaches a scheme of immigration, somewhat different in point of material from that which flows unopposed into the United States. He says, "I could bring over with me (if my plan of settling takes place) a number of experienced farmers & useful laborers, if they could be anywhere settled jointly with me. . . . The first thing, however, which I wish to be informed in is, how a traveller like myself, how I myself would be received, and whether permitted to travel with the same liberty that one may in Europe? Whether a traveller of this description must not expect to meet with suspicions & jealousies & the effect of old grudges to us Englishmen? Whether one must not expect to experience many occasions of humiliating treatment that would destroy all pleasure in & obstruct all advantage to be derived from such a philosophic journey?"

What would have been Pownall's reception can be the matter of speculation to the curious reader who may care to use his ingenuity on the subject. That Pownall wrote a very sensible letter to the Boston committee in 1770 at the time of the "massacre" and referred to that event as "shocking," may be seen by referring to "Historical Manuscripts in the Public Library of the City of Boston, Number Two," published 1902. In the letter to James Bowdoin quoted above, Governor Pownall says, "Enclosed I send to you & Dr. Cooper or to either singly & separately to make a deed of gift for me to Harvard College of the 500 acres of land I have in Pownallborough, which were granted to me by the Kennebeck Company." This gift he made to found a lectureship in political law, but, "This foundation proved altogether ineffectual for the object proposed by the friendly donor. The lands, had, during the American war, without his knowledge, been sold for taxes, and after great trouble and expense in redeeming and getting possession of them, the produce of their sale but little exceeded $300." (Josiah Quincy's "History of Harvard University.") As we can see, the gift came virtually to nothing and Harvard is today without a Pownall lectureship.

So much impressed was Pownall with the growing commerce of America and its possibilities, of which he spoke almost prophetically, that in 1780 he wrote the "Memorial to the Sovereigns of Europe" in which among other things he proposed to the powers that they should take steps to protect American commerce whatever the relation might be among the powers as to each other. The book is well known and exhibits the projective quality of political thought that we have spoken of before. Equally well known was his book on the administration of the colonies which under that title appeared in 1764 and went through five editions. The dictionary of national biography says of him in relation to his parliamentary career, that though he became an adherent of Lord North and opposed Burke's conciliation bill, he "displeased his new friends by insisting that England's sovereignty over America had gone forever, and by urging his countrymen to circumvent the French by making a commercial treaty with the revolted colonies." The reader has probably seen by this time that Pownall was one of those fortunate or unfortunate men whose opinions are so correct that the public takes a hundred years' toll of them by way of maintaining its self respect. He wrote another "Memorial" addressed to the "Sovereigns of Europe and the Atlantic," which is described in his biography by Charles A. W. Pownall, Esq., London, 1908. We shall end our paper with a quotation from this biography which quotes in turn and shows how Governor Pownall foresaw much that is happening today; his biographer says of him that "the old idea of the mutual relations between employer and employed, the one finding work and the other doing it, would disappear. He saw the trades' union coming, far distant as it was, he said that in the future:

"They will find the labourer and working manufacturer and mechanic making claims on his employer, on his own terms, and his own side of the question, with a spirit and conduct of conspiring revolt organized into a secret imperium of command and obedience, of maintenance and correspondence, by which when they think it necessary to enforce these claims, they are always able to do it."

MR. WEEKS TO GO TO PITTSBURG ON REFORM MISSION

WASHINGTON—Representative Weeks of Massachusetts leaves tonight for Pittsburg. He will deliver an address before the American Club tomorrow night on the work of the national monetary commission, of which he is a member.

The commission held a meeting today and decided to invite representatives of all organizations throughout the country to appear before the commission to give their views on proposed legislation for currency reform. These will include not only business men's organizations but also the agricultural interests and labor organizations. It is expected that these hearings will extend well into the summer.

DEFENSE IN CASES OF DYNAMITING TO ASK VENUE CHANGE

Judge Hilton, Associate
Counsel, Says Trials Will Not Take Place in Los Angeles, if They Can Help It.

BURNS BEFORE JURY

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—The trials of John J. and James W. McNamara and Orrie E. McManigal on charges of participation in the Los Angeles dynamiting will not take place in this city, if the attorneys for the defence can help it. Judge O. M. Hilton of Denver, who has been retained as associate counsel for the defence, announced today that his first work in the legal battle will be to obtain a change of venue from Los Angeles on the ground that this city is a hot-bed of prejudice against the accused. "I ask the people to withhold judgment until all the facts are in," Hilton said. "This is going to be the most titanic struggle between labor and capital in our history."

The three prisoners, guarded by 11 of William J. Burns' detectives, are expected to reach Los Angeles this afternoon. They will be allowed to consult Judge Hilton and probably will be arraigned tomorrow.

The train is due at 2:30 p. m., but it is expected that the three prisoners will be taken off the car in the suburbs and rushed through to the jail here on autos.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.

—When the grand jury assembled today it had before it as a witness Detective William J. Burns who Tuesday night was served with a warrant charging him with complicity in the alleged kidnapping of J. J. McNamara, secretary and treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, who is alleged to have been implicated in the Los Angeles Times building explosion. Mr. Burns was subpoenaed to appear on Tuesday.

The three attorneys who were arraigned Tuesday on kidnapping charges spent two hours in jail because of delay in obtaining the $10,000 bonds each was required to furnish for his appearance before the grand jury. They are Walter Drew and J. A. G. Badorf of New York; counsel and assistant counsel for the National Erectors Association, and W. Joseph Ford, assistant district attorney of Los Angeles.

Frank Fox, a chauffeur, charged with having assisted in the alleged kidnapping of McNamara, in that he drove the automobile in which McNamara was taken from this city last Saturday, was released under $5000 bond to appear before the grand jury.

Detective Burns was arrested while he was on his way to the court of Justice of the Peace Manning to surrender. He also was released under $10,000 bonds to appear before the grand jury.

Five witnesses were examined by the grand jury on Tuesday.

Superintendent of Police Hyland and Captain of Detectives Holtz were the first summoned and it is intimated that the grand jury purposes to learn if the police officers and Police Judge Collins exceeded their authority in the part they took in the arrest and extradition of McNamara.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—The California State Federation of Labor has issued an appeal to the public to give John J. McNamara and the others accused of being implicated in the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building the benefit of presumption of innocence.

A resolution was passed by the executive board denouncing the crimes charged as "so heinous and revolting that no just punishment could ever be meted out."

NEW YORK—Timothy Healy, president of the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen, joined with Samuel Gompers in denouncing the arrest of the McNamara brothers and McManigal as a plot against labor by capital.

MARINETTE, Wis.—The woods in the vicinity of Pembine, this county, are being scoured in search of M. Schmidt, one of the alleged dynamiters wanted on the charge of being in the conspiracy to destroy the Los Angeles Times building.

WASHINGTON—Immediate investigation of the arrest and extradition of J. J. McNamara of Indianapolis is provided for in a resolution introduced in the House Tuesday by Representative Victor Berger of Wisconsin, the socialist member.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—The Alabama Federation of Labor, at its session of the eleventh annual convention Tuesday, passed a resolution of protest against the methods employed in the arrest of J. J. McNamara at Indianapolis. Copies of the resolutions were sent to President Taft, to the Governors of Indiana and California and to the National Civic Federation at New York.

CHICAGO—Clarence Darrow, the lawyer who defended Moyer, Pettibone and Haywood in the famous Western Federation of Miners case, returned today from Indianapolis and authorized the statement that he would not consent to act as chief counsel for the McNamaras and McManigal.

TILTON RESISTS ILLINOIS SENATE CONTEMPT ORDER

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—Declaring the order of the Illinois Senate Lofimer senatorial bribery investigation committee directing him to produce his records is an unwarrantable attempt at seizure, Edward Tilden of Chicago, president of the National Packing Company, and reputed custodian of the alleged $100,000 Lofimer bribery fund, today resisted arraignment for contempt before the Illinois Senate.

The contempt charge is the result of Mr. Tilden's refusal to produce his books covering the period of the legislative campaign for the election of Senator Lofimer in 1909 and immediately after. The committee desires to examine them for the purpose of tracing any contributions made to the alleged bribery fund.

CHIMNEY FALLS THROUGH ROOF.

Miss Ann McGrath of 4 Oliver place, South end, a laundry woman employed at John N. Landers' laundry at 695 Washington street, was struck by a chimney which fell through the roof at noon today. She passed on. Workmen attaching a fire escape to the rear of an adjoining building tied a guy rope to the chimney and the strain of hoisting a girder toppled the chimney over.

CASH PILING UP IN BANKS.

WASHINGTON—Bank reports from all sections of the country indicate an enormous piling up of cash. Treasury officials say the cause is a slackening condition of business or the fact that the banks are beginning to prepare themselves for late summer and autumn demands.

EAST BOSTON HIGH HAS ONLY TWO 1910 BALL PLAYERS LEFT

Coach O'Brien Working Hard to Develop Pitcher to Take Edward Peterson's Place.

GAMES SCHEDULED

East Boston high school will have to build up a baseball nine from almost all new men, as only two of last year's nine are available. Fred L. O'Brien, a graduate of the school, who pitched professional baseball for Toledo in the American Association, is coaching the candidates.

Coach O'Brien is striving to develop a first string pitcher, as Edward Peterson, who pitched last year, is not a candidate. The most promising of the candidates for pitcher are George Boyce, Warren Shaw, Morris Cohen and Septimo Caruso.

Robert Alexander, who was second string catcher last season, is the first choice for catcher. His work behind the bat so far this year compares favorably with any of the schoolboy catchers.

The fielding of John Fitzgerald on first base has been of a high order, but he will have to improve his batting in order to clinch his hold on the position. Second base will be taken care of by James Maguire.

Levine, who will play at shortstop, is one of the best men at this position ever developed at the school. His hitting has been of a high order.

Captain Frank Sheehan, who played second base last year, has been shifted to third base on account of the scarcity of candidates for that position. Sheehan is one of the fastest men on the team and last year he led his teammates in stolen bases. His fielding and batting are both of high order.

The only veteran available for the outfield is Christopher Sheehan, who played left field last year. Sheehan has been showing improved form in practice, his hitting being especially good, most of his hits being line drives. William Nugent looks good in center field, while right fielder Sidney Milwood, Thomas Carey and Warren Carey are competing. Manager Norton has arranged the following schedule:

May 4, Commercial at East Boston; 5, Roxbury at East Boston; 10, Brighton at Brighton; 22, Mechanics at Fenway; 28, Quincy at Quincy; 31, West Roxbury at West Roxbury.

HARVARD NINE BLANKS TRINITY

Harvard's baseball nine shut out Trinity Tuesday afternoon on Soldiers field by a score of 2 to 0. The victory was secured by good fielding, in which three double plays figured. Harvard was superior in all departments of the game.

RATIONAL GOLF

The caprice of golfing fashion is shown in nothing more clearly than in the abandonment by the Royal St. George's Golf Club of the most famous hazard on their links, says the London Globe.

The towering sand hill, with its grisly terraces of blackened timber, and its great pit of sand and stones which faced the golfer at the sixth tee at Sandwich, has been, for the last 25 years, one of the most outstanding landmarks in the whole field of golf, and has provided one of the most exciting and trying shots to be found on any course. The tramping down of the bents and loose sand, which formerly made the pit in front of the hazard the fozzler's nightmare, has robbed the tee shot of much of its terror, and the invention of the rubber cored ball has brought the carry within the compass of the moderate driver, even against the wind; but still the "Maiden" was so formidable an obstacle that the stoutest hearted score player never breathed freely till it was safely passed. Many a promising medal score has there come to an end, and many a wouldbe open champion's hopes lie buried in the treacherous sand and entangling bents, which form the "Maiden's" outworks.

But it has not been the reduction of her terrors that has brought about the "passing of the Maiden." She is still one of the most formidable of golfing hazards. It is not that she is passe, but that the pusillanimous golfer no longer having the courage to face her, pass her by on the other side, taking her in flank where her green is practically open and unguarded. The ostensible reason put forward for the abandonment of the hazard is that the shot demanded for its negotiation was a "blind" one. You could not see the green nor the hole to which you were playing from the tee! It was not sufficient that there was a direction flag on the top of the sandhill indicating the exact line to the hole, and that every golfer knew the distance beyond the hill, and the configuration of the ground on the far side so well, that he could tell the moment he struck his ball, whether he would find it on the green or not. The new golfer, or perhaps one should say the new green architect, demands that the green and the hole shall be in full view of the player as he strikes his ball, and characterizes as "unfair" and "fuzzy" any disposition of the ground which hides the green from the player.

This crusade against blind holes began about 10 years ago, and it has been one of the chief causes of the monotony and poorness that have fallen upon golf in these latter years. Of course it is a pure fad, and like most fads it had a basis of justification. On the old courses there were certainly too many blind holes and blind shots, but that did not prove that "blindness" was a bad thing in itself. It only proved that too much of it was bad, and robbed the game of the variety which is its greatest charm. The obvious remedy was to reduce the number of blind shots, not to eliminate them altogether. But when a leading authority, himself a champion, laid it down that there should be no blind shots to the hole, "no, not one," it cannot be wondered at that green committees, who seem always delighted to get hold of any new doctrine, hastened to get rid of so damaging a defect.

To the plain observer, what made the matter more absurd was that the very courses which at the time the agitation started had fewest blind shots were the least popular, and the very holes which the new doctrine condemned were declared by other champions and first-class players to be among the best holes in the world. These facts were brought out in discussions which were conducted in Golf Illustrated a year or two ago, when the leading players stated which, in their opinion, were the best holes and courses. Deal and Sandwich, which have many blind shots and holes, received 74 votes each, and Prestwick, another course where there is a lot of blindness, received 134, while Muirfield, where blind shots are conspicuous by their absence, received only seven. Nor were the votes given for the best holes less striking. Of three-shot holes the authority above referred to gave the fifth hole at St. Andrews as his favorite, in spite of his pronouncement that no hole should have a blind approach.

The two-shot hole which received the most votes was the 17th at Prestwick, where the approach is also blind. For it four open champions voted—Mr. Hilton, H. Vardon, W. Park and J. White. Among the five favorite one-shot holes were three blind holes, the 5th at Prestwick, the "Maiden" and "Hades" at Sandwich. Four open champions, Mr. Hilton, H. Vardon, A. Herd and J. White, declared the "Maiden" to be their favorite short hole. There is no reason to suppose that these were votes taken again today the results would be different. In regard to the "Maiden" there is a strong feeling even in the St. George's Club itself against the abandonment of the old hazard, and outside, those who love the Sandwich course feel that it has been robbed of one of its best and most characteristic features. One can only hope that the majority of the club will come to see the error of their ways and restore the "Maiden" to its old pride of place among the hazards of Goldom.

At the third night of the second annual horse show in the Park riding school tonight will be seen roadsters, saddle horses up to 160 pounds, harness pairs, women's phaetons, women's pairs, women's combination horses, pairs to brougham, rounabout pairs, sporting tandems and qualified hunters up to 165 pounds.

Tuesday night there was a greater attendance than on the opening night, and the events were run off with greater precision. Miss Helen Foss, Governor Foss's daughter, rode her horse Frolic and won a blue ribbon and a cup. Governor and Mrs. Foss remained at the show during the entire evening.

A feature of the evening was the victory of M. M. Dimond's Florham Flash, ridden by Miss Eleanor Sears. The victory was won over a set of first class horses, among which was Mrs. C. A. Munn's Sultan, which has won 32 cups since it has been in competition.

In the jumping class Miss Leslie Bradley's Woodside captured the blue, while Miss A. Agassiz's Headlight was unplaced. Rob Roy was awarded second in this class and Miss Marion Lassell's mount carried off the third. The jumping of the horses in this class was of high order, not one of them missing the four jumps over a three-foot barrier.

PHILLIPS EXETER TENNIS TEAM TO HAVE BUSY YEAR

EXETER, N. H.—A busy season is planned for the Phillips Exeter Academy tennis team this spring. The first date will be on May 6, when it will meet a team from the Harvard law school composed of former intercollegiate stars. On May 13 it will meet the Dartmouth freshmen. May 20 a large number of the leading men will take part in the Harvard interscholastic tournament at Cambridge, and many look to see MacVeagh win the cup, as he was one of the leaders last year and is in better form this season.

A match will be played with the Harvard freshman May 27, and on June 7 the annual meet with Andover will take place. Later in June the St. Paul's school team of Concord will be met in a match.

All the matches will be at Exeter except the Harvard interscholastic at Cambridge. The leading players are J. C. MacVeagh of New York, Fenimore Cady of Exeter and W. E. Davis of San Francisco, Cal.

DOOIN LEADING BATSMAN.

NEW YORK—The first set of batting averages compiled shows Crawford of the Detroiters leading the American league with the fine average of .526. In second place is Lajoie of Cleveland with .455. The Nationals are led by Captain Dooin of the Philadelphians with .571. Captain Clarke of Pittsburgh is second with .445.

REELECT B. A. A. OFFICIALS.

The board of governors of the Boston A. A. met at the clubhouse Tuesday afternoon and reelected George B. Morrison president, L. Stockton vice-president, George W. Beals secretary and Nathaniel Anthony treasurer for the coming year. The committees of last year also were reelected with a few changes.

ELECT GAY YALE SOCCER HEAD.

NEW HAVEN—At a meeting of the Yale soccer football team Tuesday night Alexander W. Gay '12 S., of East Hartford, was elected captain for the coming season. Gay played forward during the last season.

PRINCETON NINE IS DEVELOPING SATISFACTORILY

Pitching Staff Promises to Be Stronger With Return of F. White—Play West Virginia Today.

PRINCETON, N. J.—The Princeton baseball team is continuing its program of a regular game Wednesday and Saturday and practice games with the second team in between. A hard game with West Virginia is expected today and with Cornell on Saturday. A Greenbaum '12 will probably pitch the first game, with A. Roger as a possible substitute and T. Woodie '11 work against Cornell.

The team so far has won all but three of its games with other colleges. It lost the first game of the season and then started winning, keeping it up until last week, when it played Georgetown a tie game, won from Pennsylvania State and then lost, for the first time in five years, to Brown. Woodie has pitched all three of these games but each time has pitched very good ball. He has been working better than he ever did and has all his old speed. Greenbaum and Rogers have been doing pretty well when used, so when White is added to the staff it will be exceptionally strong.

There are no changes in the line up. L. R. Lackey '11 is still behind the bat and is improving. He is still slow on the throw to second, but is getting better each week. G. E. Winants '12 is playing first and is learning to handle himself there. He is still erratic in his playing, but is being kept on the team for his hitting. He is a big man and hits the ball hard when he connects with it. Roger Presscott '11 on second seems to be a fixture and has been playing a good game. His hitting during the past week has brought his average up near the top and he has been fighting it out with George Conner '11, the third baseman, for high honors for the week. Capt. S. W. White '12 is on short and is likely to stay there. There is little hope that T. T. Pendleton '12 will be back in the game so Captain White will cover shortstop in his absence.

Roy Bard '11, C. H. Sterrett '12 and R. Carter '12 make up the outfield. Bard has not been hitting up to his last year's form as yet but continues to beat out slow infield hits and makes good use of his speed on the bases. Sterrett is the heaviest hitter on the team and Carter has been doing well. The latter has a good head and has gotten more bases on balls than any man on the team. He is left handed and is batting second in the list.

The team as a whole is in good shape and is ready to tackle the hard end of its schedule. Some changes are expected in the line-up before the big games but it is impossible to tell whether Coach Clark will make them or not. He seems well satisfied with the work so far. The Tigers are hoping to get even with Brown when they are here May 10 and will have the advantage of playing on their home grounds to help them do it.

STONE NOT TO HAVE CREW.

Owing to the scarcity of material Stone school will not be represented by a crew in the Interscholastic Rowing Association regatta this year. Two veteran men, whom Coach Keays had depended upon for a backbone of the four this year, will not be eligible, because of the age rule in the association. A canvass of the other candidates failed to show any promising material, and with great reluctance the school has decided to give up the sport so far as the regatta is concerned.

FEW AT PENN TRAINING TABLE.

PHILADELPHIA—Pennsylvania baseball, track and rowing athletes to the number of 36 were taken to the training table Tuesday. The policy of retrenchment adopted by the athletic association following the decrease in football receipts is evident in the small number at the table.

Though the greatest essential in an automobile is serviceability there are several others that rank very close to it in importance, things that at least add to the desirability of the car. One of these is comfort. Comfort such as is had from a smooth, easy riding car; one's that well upholstered; with heavy cushions, a car with good roomy seats and body.

This does not mean necessarily a big, bulky car of great weight that is hard on tires, requires a lot of gasoline and oil and is therefore expensive to maintain.

A very good example of this is the Selden car. Certainly no more comfortable car could be desired than this and yet in getting such great comfort nothing in the way of graceful lines or all-round attractiveness has been taken from the car.

Long wheel base, liberal springs of perfect steel, deep, well cushioned seats and such are what result in comfort to such a marked degree in this car.

This feature—comfort—has been a pronounced characteristic in all Selden cars, but is more strongly characteristic of the 1911 models than of previous years.

WESLEYAN LOOKING FOR TRACK VICTORY IN WILLIAMS MEET

Especially Strong in Short Distance Races With Promising New Men in Distance Runs.

WEIGHTS ARE WEAK

MIDDLETOWN, Conn.—Wesleyan will meet Williams in this city on Saturday in the first dual track meet of her season, and if Coach Hunter's prediction comes true, the cardinal and black should win the meet by about 10 points. Last year at Williamstown the result was a tie.

Wesleyan will have no difficulty in winning most of the points in the 100 and 220-yard dashes, with Robson, Wood and Wendell, all veterans. McGovern, a freshman from East Boston, Mass., is showing up well in the dashes and will also be entered. In the quarter-mile Wood should take first place, while Hastings and McGovern capture at least one of the other places.

Wendell, who ran the hurdles last year, is again entered and should win at least one of these events. The services of Captain Bacon of last year's team, however, will be particularly missed. Francis, a new man, who is showing up well, is also entered in both these events, while Captain Wood of the relay team will run in the high hurdles.

In the distance runs, however, most of Wesleyan's men are untried, although Thompson of last year's team will run the mile and half-mile. Halvorson of Saugus, Mass., who entered this year, is entered in both the mile and two-mile. Wesleyan will have six men in the latter event.

The field events were Wesleyan's weak points last year, and a special effort has been made to strengthen the squad in this department. Most of the entries in these events are new men. Wright and Sutherland of last year's squad will, however, contest in the high jump. Parkinson, Wesleyan's star in the weight events, will not be in condition to take part in the meet it is thought and his absence will be keenly felt.

HARVARD 1914 CREW AT TABLE.

The training table of the Harvard freshman crew has started at the Varsity Club with eight men. More will be added as the season advances, those eating at the table now being only the members of the first freshman eight. The men chosen for the first table are: E. K. Carver, W. A. Cleary, C. H. Crombie, M. T. Gardiner, L. H. Mills, J. S. Morgan, Jr., Q. Reynolds, F. H. Trumbull and A. Beane, the latter being the coach of the freshmen.

You Handle The Holder—Not The Soap

The L-S Shaving Soap Holder really helps you while you shave. Instead of holding a soggy stick of soap covered with tinsel or tissue, you handle a holder that is dry itself and keeps your soap dry and firm.

L-S SPIRAL SHAVING STICK AND HOLDER

If your face is tender and inclined to bleed, or if your beard is unusually wiry, you need a soap that is non-caustic and that will induce a stubborn "growth" to cut easily. L-S Spiral Shaving Stick in the patented L-S holder will solve for you this last problem of self-shaving. The box grips and protects the soap until it is worn down to a wafer. No soap is wasted and one holder does duty for years.

The L-S Holder, heavily silver plated, a handsome toilet article of permanent value, filled with two L-S sticks. 50c. In Nickel, filled with two sticks. 25c. Refilling the sticks only 10c each.

AUSTRALIA IS VOTING UPON PROPOSALS TO CONTROL MONOPOLY

already been employed since the establishment of the Federation, but hitherto the appeals have taken place at the time of an election. On the present occasion there is no election, and the personal element, which usually plays so large a part in political contests, will be absent.

The bills embodying the two proposed laws were passed by an absolute majority of each House on Nov. 16, 1910. These laws are so closely related that no attempt was made to separate them in the discussion.

Both acts deal with section 51 of the federal constitution. This section defines the ambit of federal powers, and the commonwealth government is asking for an extension of these powers, in order that it may be in a position to control monopolies, regulate trade and commerce, and exercise jurisdiction over the whole domain of industry.

During the debate in Parliament the attorney-general refused to consider a proposal to embody in the act a definition of a monopoly. Mr. Hughes pointed out that the disputes on technical points that would follow such an attempt would be sure to defeat the intention and purpose of the proposed legislation.

It will be observed, therefore, that the right to declare a monopoly is reserved to Parliament. The discovery of the fact that the agents of the American meat trust are at present operating in Australia has aroused widespread attention and will do much to strengthen the arguments and forward the policy of the labor government.

The proposed laws which are to be submitted to the people must be passed by a majority of the votes in four states out of the six and by a majority of all the electors voting. The policy of the labor party with respect to the subjects discussed in this letter, is opposed by practically every important daily paper in Australia.

PERTH, West Australia.—The Hon. A. Fisher, prime minister, before starting for London for the coronation festivities and the imperial conference, addressed a farewell message to the people of Australia, in which he referred at great length to the referendum.

Touching on the contingency of the people's vote going against the conferring of larger powers on the federal parliament, he stated that their verdict would not be taken as final and that the matter would again be submitted to them at a later date.

VESSELS FOUNDER ON GRAND BANKS

ST. PIERRE, Miquelon.—Foundering at sea of the French banking schooner Victor Helene of St. Malo, France, having a crew of 22 men, formerly the Gloucester fisherman Stranger, and of the French brigantine Bettina, the latter carrying passengers and merchandise from St. Malo, France, for St. Pierre, was reported here Tuesday by vessels which brought ashore safely all who had been aboard the two vessels.

Both went down on the Grand banks, the Victor Helene on April 10, and the Bettina after a collision with ice floes in the same vicinity. The latter had 17 persons aboard, including the crew. All were saved.

DR. SNEDDEN URGES ADAPTING STUDIES TO THE BENT OF PUPILS

tinuation of the same kind of work in high school or directly into the occupation of the future if necessary. These branches would be commercial, literary, manual arts and household arts.

The commercial course would include those who intend to take commercial courses in high school and enter business; the literary course for those who intend to go through high school and college; the manual arts course for those who intend to pursue the industrial or general courses in high school and enter upon a trade; and the household arts course for girls who would devote their time to home making.

General studies would make up two-thirds of each one of the various courses and would be taken by all the pupils in common. The distinctive studies of each course and the consequent segregation of the classes would form the other third of the school work.

The general studies common to all the courses would be literature, composition, spelling, penmanship, mathematics, geography, history, science, physical training, music and general exercises. The distinctive course studies would be:

Commercial—Bookkeeping, business forms and procedures, business arithmetic, related designs, typewriting and hand-work.

Literary—Foreign languages, algebra, geometry and drawing.

Manual arts—Various forms of manual work, applied arithmetic, drawing, some study of physics and, it is hoped by Dr. Snedden, industrial history.

Household arts—Designing and arithmetic as applied to the household arts and some study of the social life of the home.

"I wish to emphasize strongly," said Dr. Snedden today, "that there is no segregation of classes in the general studies. That comes only in the distinctive course studies. There is no compulsion. The various courses are equally open to the individual choice of each child. The plan is thoroughly democratic."

"The object to be attained is to give each pupil an opportunity to follow out some line of work to which he is best adapted and to better equip for practical work those who must leave the schools before entering high school, or at the completion of the high school course."

VERMONT FARM TRAIN STARTS

WINDSOR, Vt.—The "better farming" train of five cars under the guidance of the University of Vermont, Central Vermont Railway and state departments of agriculture, started from Windsor station today at 10 a. m. to make a tour of the country traversed by the Central Vermont lines in the interest of better farming.

The train was in charge of O. L. Martin of Plainfield, state commissioner of agriculture, the editor of Montpelier Daily Journal and the editor of the Vermont Magazine.

NEW BEDFORD SEEKS CHANGES

W. F. Williams, city engineer of New Bedford, appeared before the board of harbor and land commissioners at the State House today to explain the plans submitted with a petition from the city for authority to build an extension of the Merrimack street sewer in Acushnet river.

Y. M. C. A. PLANS MEN'S HOTEL.
COLUMBUS, O.—Instead of a campaign to raise $40,000, as was made two years ago, Columbus will probably witness this fall a campaign by the Y. M. C. A. to secure either $200,000 or $400,000. The highest figure will be sought if it is decided to build the 400-room men's hotel on the lot just south of the present central Y. M. C. A. site, plans for which are now under discussion.

GAS PLANT FOR ROSEBURG, ORE.
ROSEBURG, Ore.—The city council has granted W. F. Boardman & Co. of San Francisco a franchise for gas purposes and a term of 50 years. NEW ORLEANS, La.—The southern commercial congress, through its managing director, Grosvenor Dawe, has announced that it would celebrate in New Orleans with a land and naval pageant the opening of the Panama canal in October, 1913. KLAMATH GETS LARGE MILL.
KLAMATH FALLS—Plans are now under way for the construction of a large sawmill and box factory for Klamath to be erected at once. The mill will have the firm name of the Pelican Bay Lumber Company. Papers of incorporation for $150,000 have been filed.

MR. CARNEGIE BEFORE GRAND JURY DISPUTES SOME BANK STORIES

NEW YORK—Andrew Carnegie, who appeared before the grand jury on Tuesday after he had been told that if he did not come voluntarily process, servers would be sent for him, declared that he had never promised any assistance to the Carnegie Trust Company nor given any promise or assurance to the banking department that he would come to its aid.

His denial of this reported defence of the banking department for not closing the Carnegie Trust Company months before it did is without equivocation, and unless some explanation other than has yet been given is forthcoming the grand jury will be asked to vote an indictment for the failure to close the trust company last April.

O. H. Cheney, superintendent of banks, will not be called as a witness before the grand jury. If he wishes to make a statement he must appear voluntarily and waive all immunity. He said when told that Mr. Carnegie had testified that he had nothing to say and would have nothing to say.

FRANCONIA, NEARING PORT, LARGEST SHIP EVER DOCKED HERE

Star line, D. O. Ives, traffic manager of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Colonel Graham of the Canadian Club, Frank Barr, manager of the Boston & Maine railroad, J. H. Hustis of the Boston & Albany road, numerous federal, state and city officials and Boston merchants who handle imported merchandise.

This is the first trip of the Franconia to Boston, her maiden trip being made to New York early this year. The Franconia is the largest liner to enter Boston harbor up to the present time, and is bringing on this voyage 49 saloons, 594 second cabin and 1658 steerage passengers from Liverpool and Queenstown. It is the newest vessel of the Cunard line and was launched July 23, 1910. The Franconia is a sister ship of the Mauretania, and although not as large as that vessel or the Lusitania, she is an enormous ship with a net tonnage of 18,000 and a length over all of 625 feet.

The speed of the new ship is also great in proportion, and her twin propellers send her through the water so fast that in 10 minutes she could run from West and Tremont streets to Eggleston square. The ship has a carrying capacity of 8000 tons of coal, 2000 tons greater than the Saxonia.

Other principal measurements of the vessel show the breadth over all is 72 feet, displacement 25,000 tons, height of the funnels above the lowest furnace bars 140 feet, diameter of the funnels 17 feet 6 inches.

The public rooms on the deck are arranged like those of the Lusitania and the Mauretania. The staterooms of the second cabin are all amidships. The dining tables vary in size, seating from four to eight.

The Franconia has a beautiful gymnasium, a swimming pool, and a great ball room at the disposal of the passengers, and, not least among the features of the ship, is the garden tea room, beautifully decorated with potted plants and flowers.

CORRECTS SOLDIER'S RECORD.

WASHINGTON—A bill to correct the military record of Frederick E. Fiske of Brockton was introduced in the House on Tuesday by Representative Harris. Mr. Fiske, then a New Yorker, volunteered for the defense of Moorehead City, N. C., and served through the war, but the enlisting sergeant failed to make the proper record.

Mr. Cotton, who is a native of Warrington, Eng., has arranged since his arrival for exhibitions in Rochester, Portland and Providence, which will be held during the next 12 months.

ASSAULT UPON FEZ REPULSED AND CITY IS GIVEN PROVISIONS

TANGIER, Morocco—Advises from Fez under date of April 19 state that 2000 rebel tribesmen attacked the city from the north, but were repulsed after a heavy fire by the infantry and artillery. The government loss was slight.

Provisions have arrived in the city which is holding out successfully. Further news from Fez received by the British legation Tuesday night says that the route through the Muledjans territory is now open, and the consuls have decided to advise Europeans wishing to leave the city to do so at once.

Captain Bremond, in charge of the French column and the Sultan's forces, has had a sharp fight with the Cherada tribesmen, who are trying to intercept a supply column from Alcazar.

The rebels were completely routed by the artillery fire. The French losses were not serious.

It is reported that a French newspaper representative, M. Houel, who left here for Fez recently, has been captured by the rebels.

Advises from Mequinez, 36 miles southwest of Fez and one of the summer residences of the Sultan, announce that Mulai El Zin, a brother of Sultan Mulai Hafid, has been proclaimed Sultan by the rebel Zomnours who have captured the place.

CASA BLANCA, Morocco.—General Moinier, commanding the French forces here, has issued a proclamation to the rebellious tribesmen, stating that France does not propose to occupy new territory but merely to assure the safety of foreigners and reestablish order.

BATTLESHIP BACK TO BE TUNED UP FOR CORONATION

After a record breaking cruise of approximately 17,000 miles within 83 days, the dreadnought Delaware has arrived in Boston to begin her tuning up for the English coronation ceremonies in June. She steamed into the harbor Tuesday night. It was said at the navy yard today that the battleship will not dock at Charlestown.

Today, instead of coming to the navy yard, the ship will stay in the lower harbor, take aboard 1000 tons of coal and then start from there for Rockland, Me., where Friday or Saturday, or probably on parts of both days, the ship will undergo its full power 24-hour sustained engine test and run, the most exacting test that can be given a warship.

TABLETS TO HONOR CIVIL WAR PUPILS OF THREE SCHOOLS

Three bronze tablets in honor of the pupils of the Chapman, Lyman and Samuel Adams schools in East Boston who fought in the civil war, are to be placed, one in each school, by the Gen. Benjamin Lincoln chapter, D. A. R. The presentation is to be made in the assembly hall of the Chapman school on the evening of May 26, which is the date of the last surrender of Confederate troops. Each tablet will be accompanied by a book containing names of the soldier-pupils.

Each tablet measures 34x36 inches and is surrounded by an oak frame. At the top is a spray of laurel and underneath is the inscription "In memory of pupils of this school who served in the civil war, 1861-1865. Erected under the auspices of the Gen. Benjamin Lincoln chapter, D. A. R., 1911."

The Lyman, Chapman and Samuel Adams were the only schools in East Boston at the time of the civil war.

MEDFORD RECEIVES NEW TAX MEASURE

Charles S. Taylor, mayor of Medford, has received from the State House the bill passed by the Legislature and signed by Governor Foss authorizing the city of Medford to exceed the $12 tax limit for current expenses for the next two years and placing the limit during this time at $13 on each $1000 of valuation. Mayor Taylor and the city government petitioned for exemption, as the mayor found that there were many improvements to be made which would have to come under the $12 clause and which, if once made, would mean a reduction in the tax rate for future years. The new rate will be effective in the current tax levy.

Are You Using a Magnifying Glass?

ONE striking difference between a non-advertiser doing a good business and the experienced buyer of newspaper space getting apparently the same amount of trade is, that the non-advertiser is looking at his business proceeds through a magnifying glass. Why? Because he entirely overlooks the cumulative effect of well-directed publicity, the far-reaching ultimate, if not immediate, benefit of placing his goods before an extensive buying public. He also forgets to consider what his business might be if he had advertised. So he unduly magnifies the results he gets without advertising, even though they are gratifying. Plainly he is not far-sighted and not planning an increase of business that the right kind of advertising invariably produces. Fortunately, though, this use of the magnifying glass is rapidly disappearing.

MANY successful advertisers today have been recruited from this dwindling minority of non-advertisers, and their advertising experience has shown them that the right kind of publicity, backed by the right kind of merchandise, has been the means of developing and increasing their business to a degree even beyond the power of the magnifying glass to show.

THE Christian Science Monitor is the right kind of a medium for the right kind of publicity, offering the right kind of goods. That's the only kind of advertising it seeks or accepts. Its aim in such a policy is to help maintain the commercial structure on the firm foundation of confidence, honesty and integrity; to uphold the newspaper in its rightful function, as a constructive power.

THIS policy is indorsed and supported by Monitor readers and has the approval of all right-thinking people, and on right-thinking people lies the burden of progress commercially no less than socially and politically.

HERE then you have a composite picture of the readers of The Christian Science Monitor as they are. They are attentive to and interested in trustworthy advertising as much as in any other legitimate enterprise.

IT is plain that the attitude of such a clientele is unique, that its patronage is particularly desirable, and that it constitutes a buying public which any advertiser measuring up to the Monitor's standard can cultivate with mutual advantage.

CITY HISTORY CLUB TEACHES YOUNG MEN HOW TO DO THINKING REQUIRED TO RUN MUNICIPAL AND STATE AFFAIRS

Ten Councils in Various Parts of Boston Debate Questions of Day.

RESULTS EVIDENT IN SEVEN YEARS

Leaders Mold Opinion of the Neighborhoods in Which They Live.

STANDING one day looking at the statues of Josiah Quincy and Benjamin Franklin before the city hall, Frederick J. Allen, director of the City History Club, found a boy of 14 by his side, looking too.

"What did Benjamin Franklin ever do that he should have a statue erected to him in front of the city hall of Boston?" asked the boy, evidently voicing a thought that had often puzzled him. Mr. Allen told him that this great American had been born in Boston, and that while he had moved away when he was still a youth, Boston delighted to honor his memory, and that he himself always thought affectionately of the city of his birth, and had left certain bequests to it. Then he told him of the City History Club, where the members learned about just such things as these and invited him to attend. The boy was interested and came, and was an active member for several years, until he went to work in another city.

The incident is used to illustrate the need for just such a work as the club is doing, the desire for it among the boys themselves. The club was organized eight years ago for the purpose of making good citizens. According to the Rev. Thatcher R. Kimball, the secretary, the chief fault of the bad citizen is indifference—the indifference which allows the dishonesty of other bad citizens to have full sway. It is to a large degree, he believes, a matter of education and a lack of definite ideals. Therefore the effort was to put before the boys the loftiest ideals of civic life as they have been embodied in the careers of Boston's great citizens of the past. The boys thus learn to admire honesty, patriotism, and willingness to serve the city. The club also gives them a knowledge of the city's government in all its departments, teaching them that they should be run on an honest, business-like basis, free from party politics, and that to neglect this means robbing every citizen of money and benefits.

With the elder boys the historical teaching takes a secondary place, and the boys are taught all the details of city government, are grouped into city councils, etc.

The annual report of the director,

EFFORT OF BOYS TO BECOME GOOD CITIZENS IS EARNEST

Junior city council of the City History Club in session; Jeremiah J. Murphy, the president, presiding; Alexander Luft, clerk.

Frederick J. Allen, describes the work in a concise and interesting way for the year just closed, and is given in full. It says:

The City History Club is the only organization in Boston existing solely for the training of young men in good citizenship. It has been at work for seven years, and the value of its efforts is becoming more and more apparent. The young men trained by the club have exerted a strong influence for good government in the city in recent years. They have assisted in the naturalization of foreign-born citizens, in the registration of voters and in bringing them to the polls to vote, and in circulating campaign literature and information about candidates for office. They have voted, and have led other men to vote for worthy candidates and have earnestly supported the work of the Citizens Municipal League. By petition and otherwise they have exerted an influence on city legislation, resulting in two particular instances in improvements in playgrounds and parks in the North End and in Roxbury, and in another instance in the adoption of an ordinance regulating the exposure for sale of certain food products. To such results may be added neighborhood leadership and work for sanitation, cleanliness and good order, and valuable aid in the conduct of some of our branches.

The members of the junior councils took a leading part in the conduct of the recent new voters' rally, making up 60 per cent of a large committee of young men from various houses and institutions in the city, organized to reach the young men of the entire city for the purposes of the rally. Our junior councilmen are widespread, and are leaders in the city by training and by ability, the best young men being naturally attracted to the councils.

The work of the City History Club at the present time is carried on with ten groups or branches of young men organized as junior city councils. The first councils were organized five years ago while we were still dealing chiefly with branch clubs of boys, but the success of the work with young men has been so marked and the result so much more immediate that our efforts are now concentrated upon the councils and the work growing out of them. The list at the end of this report will show where the councils meet and the extent of our work in the year of 1910 and 1911. In the councils there are enrolled about 150 young men, in nearly all cases the best of those who have grown up in our branch clubs within the past five years. We have reached the important centers of the city in work that has been continuous and effective.

Our junior city councils follow the exact organization of the Boston city council under the new charter. In each council are elected, in regular order, from the young men, a president, clerk and sergeant-at-arms; and a full list of committees is appointed, making each councilman, outside of the three elected to office, the chairman of a committee. Under the oversight of the director the members of the council introduce motions, orders and resolutions, and take an active part in committee work, in debate upon the floor, and in all that has to do with the passing of orders and city ordinances. The results are much more marked than in a debating club under ordinary conditions. The lively interest in subjects under discussion, the freedom of debate allowed, and the incentive brought to bear upon every young man as a member of a serious, public-spirited organization, or legislative body, produce most satisfactory results. A gentleman of experience and judgment who has recently visited one of our councils stated that he had seen nothing equal to our work outside of a university.

The young men who are members of the councils must know all particulars of city government and be familiar with the various features of the city charter. They must at least know about city officials and public men and movements for good government and civic betterment. Some of the members have made very commendable studies of city affairs and departments, such as parks and ferries, often going to the city hall or to proper places for information and presenting written reports to their councils.

The subjects for study and debate in the junior councils are just such matters, after the very same, as come up in the Boston city council; for instance, improvements of various kinds in all parts of the city; the consolidation of several departments into a single department; the appointment of the police commissioner, whether by Governor or mayor; suggested amendments to the city charter; a sauer observance of the Fourth of July; the extension of the right of eminent domain; the repeal of the poll tax law; the granting of public franchises; the establishment of a municipal lodging house; the annexation of Hyde Park to the city of Boston; the veto by the Governor of the bill to limit the application of civil service examination in the case of misdemeanors. One of the older junior city councils has successfully and profitably dealt with nearly 200 such matters in the form of orders and resolutions.

During the seven years of the activity of the City History Club over 1200 boys and young men have been enrolled, nearly one half of these having been members of the junior city councils in the course of the past five years. Last year the boys of the older branches were held together by means of mass meetings in various places. Twenty-four such meetings were held with an attendance of about 3000 boys and people interested in the work. The council meetings are held weekly through six months of the year, from October to May, and the average enrolment is 15 young men in a council.

An important and natural development of the work with the junior city councils is the City History Club congress recently organized. The membership of this congress is made up of the most ambitious and able members of the councils, past and present, and of young men who are attracted by the congress itself. Its organization and procedure follow those of the state Legislature and of the national Congress. The questions considered at present are those of larger city and state interest, or of state and national interest. This congress accords the very best training in parliamentary law, in debate and in logical and right thinking. At present it has a very faithful and efficient membership of 30 young men.

During the past year the director has spoken upon the councils and the general work of the club in Providence, Gloucester and Watertown. In Providence a junior city council was at once organized, and has been conducted by the secretary of the mayor of the city. In the two other places our methods will have an influence upon local work for good citizenship. Mayor Whitlock of Toledo, who spoke at the new voters' festival last spring, was so impressed by the work of the City History Club, after making full inquiry into it, that he stated he would have such a work taken up in Toledo under the direct charge of his secretary. The City History Club of New York, from which we received inspiration in the beginning, has now decided to adopt our junior city council methods in the conduct of its older branches.

One of the important results of such work as this is that leaders are being trained all over the city and of all nationalities, who, being known to the people of their neighborhoods, can do very effective work in moulding public sentiment in the right direction, and thus counteract the influence of the local boss.

One of the members of the club is Abraham L. Abrahams, son of Henry Abrahams, secretary of the Boston Central Labor Union. He was early made clerk of a council and now is conducting a council of older boys which meets on Monday evenings in his own home. An Italian, Anthony Terminiello, by request, addressed a mass meeting held in Wellesley a few nights ago on the question of establishing evening schools for the Italians of that town.

It is the custom of the members to investigate for themselves the subjects of their debates. They visit the city hall to inspect the record, dig out information from anywhere they seem likely to get hold of it and take the side of any question they do not for the purpose of developing the accomplishment of debate, but because they believe in that particular side, and to thresh out the merits and defects of a proposition.

PEACE WITH JAPAN KEYNOTE AT AMERICAN-ASIATIC DINNER

NEW YORK—At the thirteenth annual dinner of the American-Asiatic society held at Delmonico's Tuesday evening, P. C. Knox, secretary of state, attacked as a fallacy the theory that success in commerce is proportionate to the strength of armaments.

Speaking of the relations between Japan and the United States, he said: "Surely there is ample room on the broad Pacific and abundant opportunities in the regions that border its shores for the peaceful enterprises of all the nations for all time to come. I am confident that all future questions will be met and solved by both governments and both peoples in the same spirit of mutual consideration that has characterized the past."

"It is time that the right-minded people of both nations deliberately closed their ears to false reports and resolutely refuse to allow their feelings to be ruffled by the vapors of sensationalists." Baron Yasuya Uchida, the Japanese ambassador; Congressman William Sulzer and Seth Low were other speakers. There were cheers whenever a speaker declared that war between this country and Japan was "unthinkable."

Seth I. W., president of the society, read letters of regret from President Taft, Senator Lodge, James Bryce, the British ambassador, Andrew Carnegie and others. President Taft wrote: "The importance of the treaty with Japan, the conclusion of which you are assembled to celebrate, cannot be gaged solely from the standpoint of its attractiveness commercially. The treaty recently negotiated and ratified is an additional guarantee of the friendship which has so long existed between the two countries, a friendship so strong that we can well regard with complacency even the mischievous and malicious rumors so particularly circulated by friends of neither government and which so utterly lack foundation in fact."

Baron Uchida characterized war talk as "absurd, nonsensical and silly." He concluded: "No, my countrymen are essentially men of peace. How ridiculous, then, are the alarms periodically raised by the sensational press. Our ambition is not to see our flag dominate the Pacific, but to see the firmament that arches over the ocean hung with the mingled splendors of the stars and stripes and the sun flag of Japan."

APPEAL IN COTTON CASES TO BE TAKEN TO SUPREME COURT

WASHINGTON—An appeal to the United States supreme court will be made by Attorney-General Wickersham to sustain the so-called "corner counts" in the government's indictment of James A. Patten, Eugene C. Scales, Frank B. Hayne, William P. Brown and Robert M. Thompson, charged with leading the May cotton corner of 1910 on the New York exchange.

Judge Noyes, in the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York, sustained all of the counts of the indictment except those charging a corner to fix the price of raw cotton.

He condemned the practice unreservedly, but held it did not come within the jurisdiction of the law upon which the indictments were based. Attorney-General Wickersham's appeal is from that part of the decision.

NEW DIRECTORS OF ASSOCIATED PRESS ELECTED

NEW YORK—The board of directors of the Associated Press, members of which are holding a joint convention with the American Newspaper Publishers Association, today met at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel for the purpose of electing officers of the organization.

Five members of the board were re-elected Tuesday at an executive session. They were Frank B. Noyes of the Washington Star, president of the association; W. R. Nelson of the Kansas City Star, A. C. Weiss of the Duluth Herald, W. L. McLean of the Philadelphia Bulletin, and Adolph S. Ochs of the New York Times. W. H. Cowles of the Spokane Spokesman-Review was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the passing on of Harvey S. Scott of the Portland Oregonian.

Charles S. Diehl resigned as assistant general manager of the association, and Harry L. Beach as superintendent of the central division. Their places will be filled today. It was said that all the present officers, with the exception of those two, will be re-elected.

In the course of Tuesday's session a discussion arose regarding the annual dinners of the two organizations. It was pointed out that the membership is so large that it is difficult to take care of others besides members in one room. It was finally decided to refer the matter to the boards of directors, who will draw up plans to restrict the attendance at future dinners to the actual members of the associations.

CATALPA TREES FOR ARBOR DAY GILCHRIST GIFT

One hundred thousand school children in eastern Massachusetts will be enabled to observe Arbor day in a practical manner on Saturday by the generosity of the Gilchrist Company, which will provide that number of hardy catalpa trees.

Today and tomorrow, the shipment of these trees will be in progress so that the various schools will surely be in possession of the gift in season for planting on Saturday. The Gilchrist Company has received hundreds of letters from school authorities in which hearty acceptance of the offer is made, together with commendation for the firm's enterprise and thoughtfulness.

The catalpa is widely known in the East for its ornamental qualities, and is considered especially attractive when growing at the edge of a walk or in the center of a lawn.

Imitations of Nemos Waste Your Cash and Deprive You of Style

One good thing about imitations of Nemos: Very few women buy them—none a second time; and that fact prevents lots of dissatisfaction. Get a shape, but preserve your comfort and save your money. Wear a Nemo. Every Nemo contains twice as much value in material and making as any other corset at the price. Its unexcelled style features double that value. Imitations of the Nemo would be dear at half-price.

AMERICAN BIDDERS PAY HIGH FOR RARE BOOKS AT HOE SALE

NEW YORK—Americans did most of the buying at the second day of the auction of the late Robert Hoe's collection of rare books Tuesday.

Henry E. Huntington of Los Angeles, Cal., and Bernard Quaritch, a London dealer, continued to be the leaders today. The highest price reached was $9000, at which the original edition of William Blake's poem, "Milton," was sold to George D. Smith, presumably for Mr. Huntington.

Miss Belle Green, librarian for J. Pierpont Morgan, paid $3500 for a copy of another book.

William Cullen Bryant's presentation copy of "The Embargo," which Mr. Hoe bought in 1888 for $24 was sold to W. F. Wallace for $3350.

The "Ship of Fools," in which Sebastian Brandt made the first printed reference to the discovery of America, was sold to Smith, again presumably for Mr. Huntington, for $1825, and to the same bidder went a unique work by Jean Bouchet for $3400; a first edition of Braithwaite's "The Shepherd's Tales," $1075; Blake's "Aphorisms on Man," translated from the original manuscript, $1525; and a Kilmarnock edition of Burns' poems for $5800.

A romance written by Lucien Bonaparte and addressed to Mme. Juherton, whom he married in 1802, was sold to Quaritch for $1725.

The second highest price of the day's sales was $8000, paid by Quaritch for the only known copy of "Clericus et Mellicie."

The rare first issue of the narrative of Champlain's first expedition to Canada was sold to Mr. Smith for $3825, after lively bidding.

Altogether $250,231 has thus far been realized at the sales.

CONSERVATORY MEN TO PRESENT FARCIAL COMEDY

The annual Sinfonia theatricals will take place in Jordan hall, Tuesday evening, May 2, when Alpha chapter of the New England Conservatory of Music presents "Our Wives," a farcical comedy in three acts by Anthony E. Wills.

The comedy, which is replete with mirth-provoking incidents, is given for the first time in Boston and will be under the stage direction of Percy J. Burrell. All the characters will be played by men—members of the fraternity. The parts of the three wives will be taken by Louis Bessner of Boston, Raymond Simonds of Marlboro and Chester Sheldon Cook of Watertown. George Webster of Washington will play Julie, the French maid. Others in the cast are Herbert Seiler of Shamokin, Pa., as Roswell Chandler, a husband; John K. Snyder of Reading, Pa., as Walter Blair, a husband; Harry Fairfield of Kennelbunk, Me., as Lloyd Deveau, a husband; H. Chandler Wells of Dorchester, as John Stanton, the detective; Harry Barnes of Bristol, Conn., as Mallory, the reporter; Herbert Jenney of Milwaukee, Wis., and Mr. Farnsworth of Bar Harbor, Me., as expressmen. The low comedy part will be taken by Wilhelm Kaiser of Uniontown, Pa., as Oscar Seibel, a composer.

The scenes of the play are laid in Atlantic City and New York and a great part of the action takes place in trunks.

PLANS ACCEPTED BY EUGENE ELKS

EUGENE, Ore.—Architect E. E. McClaren of Portland won the competition among Eugene and Portland architects for the commission to design the building to be erected by the Eugene lodge of Elks. The structure will be 160 by 81 feet, two stories high, and will cost $40,000.

The exterior will be of red and white pressed brick with terra cotta trimmings. The first floor is entirely for business purposes and has already been leased.

One special feature that will be installed in the Elks' quarters is the ventilation of lodge room and banquet hall, which will be equipped with a fan-ventilating system, which will allow change of air in the room every eight minutes.

On the corner of the building in the second story is a balcony opening out of the clubroom with French doors; another special feature is the location of women's quarters. The lodge room will have regular size stage and all the paraphernalia rooms, orchestra balcony, beam ceiling and hard maple floor.

NEW YORK—Frederick Schneider, who arrived Monday from Russia with a wife and 14 of his 15 living children, could not answer in English when asked if he had money enough to provide for his army of Schneiders, but he produced rolls of bills, one after another, and tossed them upon the desk at Ellis island. The climax was reached when $26,500 in green and yellowbacks were piled on the examiner's desk. ## PLAYHOUSE NEWS

Powers School Recital. The third in the season's commencement exercises of the Leland Powers school took place last night in Steiner hall, and furnished a most enjoyable evening for the large audience.

Miss Marion Bertha Clark opened the program with an artistic rendering of the first act of Justin McCarty's "If I Were King." Miss Clark's voice of rare beauty was used to advantage, and her interpretation caused Louis XI. Franco's Villon and the beautiful Katherine to live again in imagination.

Dickens' tale of the two little children, Walter, aged 8, and Nora, 6, who ran away to be married at the Holly Tree Inn, because Walter's father had done so years before, was sweetly told by Miss Marion Dean Todd.

"Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" was very real, through the interpretation of Miss Gladys Bodge, who assumed cleverly the characters of Dorothy, the high-spirited heroine; her father, Sir George; Perkins, the jester, and the manly hero, Sir John Manners.

Mrs. Lockburn Scott gave an exquisite rendering of a part of Mrs. Burnett's beautiful story, "The Dawn of a Tomorrow." Mrs. Scott's work as Glad and Jinny Maturin showed both the touch of an artist and deep spiritual sympathy with the author's thought.

"The Abandoned Elopement" is an unusually funny story and was given a most clever handling by Miss Mary Houghton.

Guy Eugene Oliver's interpretation of the varied characters in the dinner scene of "Shore Acres" was a delight. His Uncle Nate was particularly good.

CENTRAL BANK PLAN INDORSED IN SPEECH AT AMERICAN HOUSE

More than 200 business men who met at the Boston Chamber of Commerce assembly at the American House this afternoon heard Robert W. Bonynge of Denver, a member of the national monetary commission, indorse the central bank plan of Mr. Aldrich. Mr. Bonynge spoke in place of Congressman Vreeland, vice chairman of the commission.

"To round out and complete our banking system we need a union of these individual units into larger units corresponding in a measure to our states," said Mr. Bonynge.

"Finally, there should be a further union of these larger units into one general national union or association of our banks which will furnish strength to the entire system and its parts and which will protect and guard the several and joint interests of each and all.

"Mr. Aldrich has recently submitted to the national monetary commission, of which he is chairman, an elaborate and comprehensive plan for a combination or union of this character of our independent banks. The plan is evolutionary and not revolutionary in character. It merely adds to our existing banking system that which the experience of all nations, including our own, has shown to be necessary to give it strength and stability. The greatest care has been taken to prevent the new association from passing under the control of either political or selfish business interests.

"It is unquestionably a work of great constructive statesmanship and will lead, it is hoped, to a critical and unprejudiced discussion of its provisions and to the final adoption either of the plan as submitted or a similar plan with such modifications as further discussion and consideration may recommend for the solution of our banking problems."

ROCKLAND, Mass.—Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston, who was the principal speaker on Tuesday night at the Board of Trade meeting, said on the question of investigating state finances:

"Every city in the commonwealth borrows money for paying its highways except Boston; many cities, if we believe the statements in the inaugural addresses of the mayors, are borrowing money for public celebrations, for the payment of school teachers, and for various other purposes which should be met out of the tax levy.

"In fact, the situation is such in many cities and towns in the state now that it is impossible for an official to give an honest statement of the financial condition of the municipality."

Miss Holton will spend a year studying music in Dresden after graduation, and will enter Wellesley upon her return. The class elected William M. Marston of Cliftondale as class historian. He is president of the literary society of the school, is a member of the football squad and intends to enter Harvard in the fall.

Of the honor parts, Miss Ione D. Proctor stood first and will be valedictorian at graduation, while Oliver James Wilson was second highest honor pupil and will deliver the salutatory. These will be the only class parts at graduation.

IMPROVERS TO DO JULY 4 PLANNING

PINS HANDY

COLORED BLOUSE

Many dressmakers have a long, narrow pincushion fastened around the waist on a belt; but a better plan, says the Ladies Home Journal, is to have a small round cushion and attach to it an elastic band from one side to the other, just large enough to slip comfortably over the hand and hold on the left wrist. The pins are always in sight by this method and easy to take out.

The vogue of the colored blouse is constantly increasing. Plain pink, blue, tan or lavender are serviceable for morning and business wear, made with the practical long sleeves and worn with stiff laundered linen collar, while afternoon blouses are of blue and white and pink and white striped muslins, with white or colored frill, short sleeves and collarless neck.—New Haven Journal-Courier.

WELL-READ QUEEN

Queen Mary is before all else a perfect wife and mother, says the Queen. But it strikes one that perhaps too much stress has been laid on her domesticity. At least scant mention seems to be made of many of her other characteristics.

The Queen's education was wide and deep and her fund of general information is remarkable. She has always been a great reader and books of travel, history and biography are seldom missed. In fact few ladies have a better knowledge of English literature. Then like most royalties the Queen is a first rate linguist and speaks and writes several languages with ease and fluency.

Queen Mary in her early days rode well and Princess Mary inherits this taste and has become a fine horsewoman. But her majesty never went with the hounds and is now seldom seen on horseback. She cares little for the more daring sports and games, but will sometimes play croquet and often goes for long walks with her children and a lady in attendance. And she dances extremely well and with evident enjoyment.

WAYS TO CLEAN

Piano keys should be wiped off with a cloth dampened in alcohol. This will cleanse them without any danger of turning them yellow.

Enameled or porcelain tubs may be easily cleaned with kerosene, which is better for the surface of the enamel than a sand soap.

To clean ivory ornament rub well with unsalted butter and place in the sunshine. If discolored, it may be whitened by rubbing with a paste composed of burned pumice stone and water, and then placing it under a glass in the sun.

If a japanned ware tray has become spotted, dip a woolen cloth in a little sweet oil and rub as hard as possible.

Soiled spots on the wall paper may be removed by careful rubbing with a dough ball made of flour and water.

To clean jewelry make a suds of tepid water with castile soap, to which add a few drops of ammonia. Wash the jewelry, rinse it and lay in a box of sawdust to dry, or polish with a bit of chamois.

Flatirons that have become spotted or slightly rusted may be cleansed with a piece of pumice stone.

To clean nickel rub it with a paste made of whiting and alcohol and polish with a piece of chamois—Philadelphia Times.

FOLDING TUCKS

Even garments to be tucked by hand should be folded by machine, says the Philadelphia North American. Adjust the trimmer to the right size, and then adjust the stitch. Remove the thread from the needle, and tuck just as if the thread were there. Then in your hand sewing you can follow the line of needle pricks. Table linen can be marked in the same way, to be hemmed by hand.

BEADED TUNIC

Almost no other trimming is required on a gown made with a transparent beaded tunic. Some of the most famous designers of the French capital use only a large soft bow of satin at the bust with such gowns.—New Haven Journal-Courier.

FASHIONS AND

COMBINATION OF CROSS-STITCH AND EMBROIDERY PATTERN

Effective design for shirtwaist front and collar and cuffs.

A COMBINATION of cross-stitch and embroidery is very effective on a shirtwaist. It should be used on either side of the box-pleat in front, and on the collar and cuffs. A band may also be worked down the center of the back if desired. The embroidery is done in the solid satin stitch and the rest of the design in the cross-stitch. The design may be reproduced to any length desired. Colored mercerized cotton No. 18 will be suitable for this pattern.

HER BUNGALOW IS HOMELIKE

Owner tells way in which she made it so.

HOW she made her bungalow homelike and comfortable at light expense is told by Mary F. B. Anderson in the Womans Home Companion. She says:

It was a tiny bungalow, but the sea view was a joy. The exterior was uncompromising—nothing could be done to beautify that, with the exception of arranging a few growing ferns and flower boxes, but the interior held all manner of possibilities. The size of the bungalow was 12 feet by 36 inside measurements. This was divided up into three rooms of equal size—dining-room, bedroom and kitchen. There was absolutely nothing in the shape of "improvements," merely the plain boarded walls of white wood, with one large cupboard in the kitchen.

Beginning with the dining-room, I procured some moldings two and one half inches wide which I nailed all around the room half way up. This formed a shelf for photographs, vases, etc., besides being a dividing line between the upper and lower half of the room. I next pasted six thicknesses of newspaper on the upper half of the room, this to form a groundwork for a final and top covering of a thick rough dull red paper, which I was able to buy very cheap at one of the department stores in the city. The climatic changes caused the woodwork to expand and contract. In the latter case, this would result in a series of cracks in the paper in each of the points of the wood were the wall paper put straight on to the boards without a groundwork of newspaper.

My next step was to make a stain composed of a small quantity of burnt umber (25 cents) worth will stain any number of rooms) mixed with gasoline and just the smallest suspicion of lamp-black. This I applied to the lower frames, etc., and to the floor about 12 inches all around from the wall. I covered the floor with plain white Chinese matting.

My curtains were of cream scrim, stenciled with a small pattern of dull red and brown. A few cushions of the same hues in my mission armchairs and in the built-up corner seat made up a delightfully cozy whole.

The bedroom, by means of a few laths and some old shades, I proceeded to divide into two rooms, one for a bedroom and the other for a dressing-room. I divided the upper and lower halves in the same way as the dining-room. When bought some white washable distemper (five pounds for 25 cents) which I mixed according to directions. Borrowing a calcimine brush, I covered the ceiling, lower halves of room, together with one or two large joists in the upper half of walls with the mixture. One coat was sufficient to make a nice white effect.

I papered the top half of the room in precisely the same way as the dining-room, substituting for the red a pale blue satin-striped rep paper. In the case of the partition made of shades it was necessary to paper it all over, the newspaper not being required.

The dressing-room I did in the same manner as the bedroom, making all hangings of green, and the window curtains in both rooms were of white frilled butter muslin.

In the kitchen I nailed the molding around as in the case of the dining-room with this exception: On the extreme edge of the molding I nailed the narrow laths which I had previously taken out of the bottom of the old shades. This made a rack to hold my plates, dishes and saucers, and the cups I hung on hooks underneath. With the remainder of my distemper I covered the ceiling, with the exception of five heavy beams running across. These I treated with dark stain, giving it the appearance of an old English kitchen. I stained the walls, both upper and lower, windows, doors, etc., with a brown stain, leaving out the lampblack in this mixture. The curtains, both long and short, were of white frilled butter muslin. After the stain has been applied the surface should be rubbed with a cloth.

ECCENTRIC DISH

An eccentric but delicious dish is a "silver and gold omelet." Beat up the whites and yolks separately, as for the well known Quaker omelet, but do not mix them. Have ready two small pans; put the white omelet in one and the yellow in the other. Let each brown on one side. Then clap the white one over on to the other, brown side uppermost.—New York Tribune.

BUY CLOSELY

Buying in small quantities at this season is the wisest plan, if one has no cellar or cool place to store the wares, as a warm kitchen closet is hardly conducive to retaining the freshness of even canned commodities.—Montreal Star.

PRACTICAL MODES FOR YOU

Two costumes for girls and suit for a boy.

PRACTICAL, modish and useful, for the younger members of the family, are the designs shown in the illustrations of these Ladies Home Journal patterns. For the little girl there is a smart coat (No. 5717), showing the most popular style feature of the season, which is the large collar. On all new models of coats, separate as well as those forming part of a suit, for the mother as well as the tiny girl, the collars are very long, very deep, mostly in sailor effect, and sometimes with two sections, a fancy collar over a very large square collar. The design shown here, while modish in its lines and cut would make a most practical model for school wear.

It could be developed in navy blue serge or chevrot, with the collar, cuffs and belt of a bright red all-batross, blue and white dotted foulard or of self-material piped with red or green. For cool days the pattern provides for a shield with standing collar which could be made of pique or of material to match the collar or the body of the coat. The large square collar is perforated for a round outline in shawl effect, and the one-piece full-length sleeve is gathered into a band cuff.

The pattern is cut only in sizes 4, 6 and 8 years; and for making size 6 requires 3 1/2 yards 27-inch, 3 1/2 yards 36-inch or 3 yards 44-inch material without up and down. If made of contrasting material, size 6 requires 2 1/2 yards 36-inch material without up and down, with 1 yard 27-inch contrasting material without up and down.

The dress (No. 5738) would make a serviceable model for school wear, developed in serge, henrietta or panama, and as an outing dress for the summer, in linen, percale or chambray. Natural color pongee would also make a practical dress and for a little touch of color, the dress could be worn with a belt and tie of brown or green satin. The dress closes at the center-front, under a box-pleat and has a broad tuck over the shoulder. The full-length one-piece sleeve is tucked in cuff effect and perforated for elbow-length, and the dress can be made with high or square neck, and with or without the turn-down collar or turn-back cuff.

The pattern is cut only in sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. For making size 12 requires 5 1/2 yards 27-inch, 4 1/2 yards 36-inch or 3 1/2 yards 44-inch material without up and down.

Serge would be recommended for boy's suit (No. 5735), but for a suit or one for the summer, linen, tea or pongee could be used, with collar and tie of contrasting color pattern consists of a blouse and knickerbockers; the long-shouldered blouse is worn in middie style or gathe with a draw-string in sailor style; sailor collar is perforated for outline and the shield can be made or without the stancing.

The pattern is cut only in sizes 8, 10 and 12 years, and size 8 requires 4 yards 27-inch, 3 yards 36-inch 2 1/2 yards 44-inch material, with and down, with 1/2 yard 27-inch contrasting material for collar and tie.

FAMILY HAS A BULLETIN BOARD

Telephone calls and other matters posted.

A FAMILY bulletin board has proved a boon to one large family none of the members of which are blessed with very long memories. This particular one was made by putting a sheet of white celluloid into an old picture frame and backing it with white cardboard. At one side a cord hangs, bearing a thick soft pencil. A small blackboard or a large slate would have done equally well, says the Womans Home Companion.

On the bulletin board the family post notices of particular interest which they have forgotten to impart at breakfast or dinner. One day's substance ran thus:

"Had a letter from Mary Smith wants Tom to send her the address that dealer where he bought the pitcher.—Sue."

"Won't be home to dinner tonight.—Tom."

"Mrs. Henderson 'phoned, mother to call her up as soon as comes in.—Jean."

And so it goes. Messages, callers phone calls, lost and found articles tabulated here for the benefit of a occasionally some one pastes up a joke or bit of verse which the of the family joy.

DRESS SHIELDS

Silk-and-rubber dress shields grow too heavy for comfort when worn with light gowns, says the New York Press. Try using about four thicknesses of tissue paper, cut in shield shape and fastened with pins. They must, of course, be changed every day. They are valuable when the dressmaker is fitting a dress of any sort, on a warm day.

CHAIR COVERS

Covers provided for the backs of chairs will prevent the soiling of draperies. These covers, made of any washable material such as denim, or crocheted material of coarse white cotton yarn, be made to slip over the back of a chair. Piazza pillows and cushions, be covered with washable slips that be buttoned on.—Delineator.

THE HOUSEHOLD

ASPARAGUS LONG A FAVORITE

Mother's way and other ways of cooking it.

ASPARAGUS is one of the dishes which cooking can make or mar. It has always been esteemed a great delicacy. It was the favorite vegetable of the ancient Romans and was introduced by them into Britain. It is much more generally used in France and England than here.

Fashion has decreed during the past few years that asparagus must be served cold at up-to-date social functions, but on the home table hot asparagus cooked en branche or cut up in a cream sauce will never go begging.

By most people the simplest way of cooking asparagus is considered best, says the Delineator. Cut off the toughest ends of the stalk where it is white and woody, and bind the remainder of the stalks together with a strip of muslin. Immerse the stalks in boiling salted water, with the tips projecting two inches above the water. In this way they will steam tender, while the rest of the stalk is cooking. Boil until tender, but not mushy, and serve with white sauce, drawn butter, mayonnaise, bechamel or Hollandaise sauce as preferred.

A French woman eating asparagus takes a stalk at a time in her fingers, dips the head in the cream sauce, and daintily nibbles her way down the stalk as far as it seems tender. In this country it is usually served on buttered toast, each slice being dipped in the asparagus liquid.

For those who would cling to asparagus cooked as mother used to cook it, the directions are simple. Cut the tender portions of the stalks into half-inch lengths. Simmer in boiling salted water, only just enough to cover, until tender; then season asparagus, liquid and all, with milk or cream, butter, salt and pepper, and serve on toast or in deep saucers. In this way the whole delicate and distinctive flavor of the asparagus is preserved.

Canapes of asparagus make a dainty entree, and, though adopted from the French, find increasing popularity here. The foundation of the canape is the same, no matter what the filling may be. Take slices of bread about two inches thick and stamp them out into neat rounds with a biscuit cutter. With a smaller cutter mark a circle in the center of each round and scoop out the crumbs to the depth of an inch, taking care to leave the sides and bottom quite firm. Arrange these in a shallow dish and pour over them a half pint of milk, to which a beaten egg has been added. Then take up very carefully and slip into a kettle of boiling fat. They will brown almost immediately and must be removed when a pale golden brown. Some cooks prefer to drop them at once into the hot fat without the milk-and-egg bath. Drain on soft paper.

Cut the tender part of asparagus into pieces of an equal size, rejecting that which is woody. Wash and simmer in salted water until tender. Drain. Put a heaping tablespoonful of butter into a saucepan with a tablespoonful of flour. Cook; then add a quarter pint of water, in which the asparagus was cooked. Let it come to a boil, add the asparagus, the juice of a lemon and a teaspoonful of finely chopped parsley. Fill the canape with this, arrange on a platter and garnish with cress or parsley and sliced lemon.

DAINTIES SERVED IN BASKETS

May luncheon with many pretty features.

SEVERAL days before this May-basket luncheon was given a tiny basket filled with small spring blossoms beneath which was tucked the invitation, was left at the door of each guest-to-be. These baskets were bought at the ten-cent store and covered with delicate shades of crepe paper, which was frilled at the edges and wound around the handles with a small bow tied at the top.

The dining-room presented a charming picture. The hostess had procured a number of common quart fruit baskets and had enameled them in white and in the delicate shades of pink, blue, lavender, green and yellow, and had also gilded and silvered a few of them. Ribbons to match the color of the baskets served as handles. The baskets were filled with small spring blossoms, the different flowers harmonizing with the baskets in which they were arranged. For instance, the white blossoms were in the blue, pink and lavender baskets, the blue blossoms in the cream, yellow, gilt and silver baskets, while the pink and red blossoms were arranged in the pale green, gray, white and silvered baskets. These baskets were suspended by their ribbon handles from the plate-rail all around the dining-room. A few ferns and vines had been added to the baskets and these trailed down against the wall. On the floor and stands were large baskets filled with ferns and trilliums, May tulips, snow-balls, lilacs and other large May blossoms.

Over the center of the table was suspended a large hoop, which had been first covered with green cloth, then with vines and sprays of fern with a blossom worked in at intervals. This hoop was suspended from the ceiling by means of four vine-covered ropes. All around the hoop were hung tiny May-baskets filled with small spring blossoms. From this hoop were also stretched vine and flower ropes reaching to each plate, where they were tied to the handles of tiny Japanese baskets filled with pink and white bonbons.

The refreshments were served altogether in baskets. In the center of the table was a fancy flower-decorated basket filled with sandwiches of different varieties, which was passed around. The creamed peas were served in baskets formed out of rolls. The bottom crust was cut off, the center scooped out, then they were placed in the oven until a light brown. These were filled with the peas and crust handles fitted on. The salad was served in little baskets made out of lettuce-leaves, and the cream cheese, which was molded in the form of little eggs, was served in tiny parsley baskets. The ices were served in little fancy baskets with the top covered with candied violets. The cake was cut into basket shapes, iced in yellow and light chocolate in criss-cross manner to resemble basket-work. Candied flowers were used to decorate the top of these cake-baskets. Whole strawberries were served in simple round raffia baskets which the hostess had woven. These were the souvenirs of the occasion. The name-cards were cut out of water-color paper and painted to resemble a woven basket, the names being written on the handles.—Exchange.

ROUGH PIANO BACK CONCEALED

Wood may be covered by curtain or screen.

WHAT shall we do with the piano?" is an oft-repeated question, especially of the dweller in a small house or flat. The grand piano, with its graceful lines, can be placed in almost any part of a room to advantage, but the upright piano, with its ugly back begging to be hidden, presents a more difficult problem. Lack of space sometimes prevents its being stood against the wall, and then, too, we are told by our musical friends that the sound of the keys is deadened by having the piano in such close proximity to the wall. Put it across a corner, and what a lot of room we feel we are wasting. And the difficulty of all this lies in the unattractive back of the piano which we dare not expose to view.

The drapery to the rescue! It may be in the form of curtains, hemmed at the top and hung in scant folds on a brass rod, which is fastened with a bracket at either end of the piano back. If the material used is very light in weight, it might be well to line the curtain so that it will retain its folds and not flutter with every slight breeze. The raw edges may be simply hemmed or edged with a braid.

The materials out of which these curtains may be made are legion: Russian crash, arras or monk's cloth, linen, velours and any of the raw silks—and they should be of the same color and design as the other draperies in the room. The woodwork of the piano, too, must be taken into consideration. If it be mahogany, dull pink or green, a tapestry design in cream, blue and brown and a gray-blue are all effective color combinations. Brown or green are good with dark mission, and an ebony finish will harmonize with any color. But let the tones be always soft and restful. For the summer-cottage piano there are the lovely crotches. If your piano is in the living-room, a soft crash stencilled or block-printed, with window hangings and a few cushions to match, would be most attractive. If in the drawing-room, use a firm silk or rich velours, edged with dull gilt furniture-braid. Another method of covering would be to utilize a discarded paneled screen. If it should not fit exactly, the arrangement of the panels will make it a simple matter for the home carpenter to cut the wood work down to the same size as the piano back. Screw in three small hooks above the top of the piano and corresponding rings in the screen, and by this means the screen may be easily adjusted. It would be advisable to drive a nail or two through the center of the middle of the framework so as to make it hang perfectly firm and even.—Delineator.

BERRY BISCUIT

Now that the strawberry season has arrived, try strawberry biscuit occasionally, says the New York Tribune. Prepare a biscuit dough, roll it out a third of an inch in thickness, cut it into oblongs and mark each in halves. Put a spoonful of sweetened berries on one half, fold the other over it and pinch the edges together with a little water. Rub with melted butter and bake.

SHIRT-WAIST HINT

The girl who likes to make her own waists will appreciate a little hint as to the correct adjustment of the sleeve, says an exchange. When basting in the sleeves of a shirt waist measure from the underarm seam of the waist the width of three fingers to the front and there place the seam of the sleeve. This method will prevent having to take a sleeve out and rebaste it in.

ELECTRICITY DOES HOME WORK

Wonder is that it is not more generally employed.

A FEW weeks ago I had occasion to give a talk on household management to a gathering of young women representing some 30 different states in the Union, writes Helen Louise Johnson. One of these, who came from Iowa farm, remarked that the most perplexible thing to her in New York City was the old-fashioned, difficult way in which the people there did their housework. She said: "I live on a farm nine miles from a town, many miles from a city. We belong to a widely scattered, ordinary farming community, of rich farmers, some hardly well-to-do, but in nearly every instance, we have our barns, outbuildings and houses lighted by electricity, and our machinery run by this power. We wash, iron, sew and in some cases cook by it. That is one of the reasons why so many of the farmers' boys and girls in that region go to college. In other places they must be kept at home to help to do the work. Our work is done just as well, not better, but there is not so much work to do. We have found it economy dollars and cents as well as time to use machines in the house as well as on the farm. You Easterners seem to me to be very much behind the times."

What is the trouble? Is it not, first, because there is a mistaken idea that electricity may be used only by the rich, and that it costs too much? And, second, gas is a familiar, electricity an unknown thing. Women fancy they understand and control gas because they turn on a cook, light, and see it burn. With this other "juice," in the shop vernacular, they but turn on a switch and heat comes from an unseen and unknown somewhere. They mistrust it, in spite of the fact that day after day their door bell rings by means of it, and they light and darken the house with safety, ease and celerity by turning on and off a switch.

It is fun, not labor, to use a sewing machine run by a motor attachment. The same motor, or that on the washing machine, can be used to turn the ice cream freezer, the bread or cake mixer, or meat chopper, as desired. The uses of the utility motor are many, and yet the housewife patiently turns the crank by hand.

The control of electric cooking apparatus is absolute, without delay, trouble, ashes, smoke, dirt, or exhaustion of oxygen. One can have heat when, where, and in the degree desired. Electricity costs about one third more than gas, but it need not even do this with care. The electric fireless cooker is no longer merely in the experimental stage, and when the cooking is planned and simplified, and the heat only used when wanted and in the right way and degree, then cooking by electricity need be no Utopian dream, but an every-day reality.

NEW RESIDENT MADE WELCOME

Little courtesies which may have large results.

THERE was once a northern man who purchased a home in a southern city, and in due time arrived on the scene, together with his family and his servants, and his household goods. On the day of their arrival in the neighborhood, the neighbors, in good old southern fashion, sent in great trays of beaten biscuit and fried chicken and a hot beverage to refresh the newcomers. The northern man was amazed and indignant. He ordered the kerchiefed tray-bearers away with the sharp assurance that he and his family were not objects of charity. If he was amazed, his neighbors were more so. Their advances had never before been repelled, and they were shocked and bewildered.

When we moved to New York from the South we bore this incident in mind, says a writer in the Woman's Home Companion, and determined to keep in our places, no matter how hard it might be. Imagine our surprise then to be invited to lunch with our across-the-hall neighbors! Perhaps it was wiser not to be too generous with one's hospitality in a city like New York, but I have known some lasting friendships to result from just such informal hospitality. When one is moving into a new apartment, and one must wait indoors until the wagons come, and there is no way to reach the grocer or the milkman, a little friendliness is not amiss.

There is a pleasant custom in the smaller cities and country towns of welcoming the new minister's family with a "surprise party," which is generally a contribution party to the ministerial pantry as well. How delightful it would be if the women's clubs or church societies were to welcome the new business man's wife or the professor's wife in the same manner. The surprise party, less the contributions, would be a cheering welcome to the lonely little woman who is trying to find herself in your town. Her husband is away all day, and she has to stay indoors and wait for the express wagons or some thing which fails to come on time, and she hasn't a servant or a telephone. She wishes she could run in and ask some one about the nearest laundry and the best milkman and the cleanest grocer store.

One woman recently welcomed a new-comer in charming fashion. The new resident was doubly lonely, for she was not only new to the town, but new to housekeeping. She had been married exactly two weeks, but determined to keep the neighbors from knowing it! She was from a far-away state and could not think of the little trips home that brides delight in. It didn't take Mrs. Old Resident long to decide that Mrs. New-Comer was a charming girl, and so she called on Mrs. New-Comer and helped her straighten out her bridal possessions and told her that she was giving a neighborhood luncheon for her. Mrs. Old Resident and Mrs. New-Comer then put their heads together and planned the luncheon. It developed that Mrs. New-Comer knew something about water colors, and so she did the place-cards. The luncheon was a success and Mrs. New-Comer felt that she had been welcomed.

TRIED RECIPES

OYSTER SALAD.
SELECT small oysters, drain off the liquor and lay the oysters upon a clean cloth to dry off the moisture.

If you use large oysters, cut them in half. Do not chop them. To each cupful allow one of crisp white celery cut with a sharp knife into dice. Stir a little mayonnaise through the mixed oysters and celery and turn into a chilled bowl lined with lettuce leaves. Pour mayonnaise over all. Garnish with stoned olives. This is a delicious supper dish.

SHRIMP AND TOMATO SALAD.
Cut a piece from the blossom end of each fair ripe tomato of fair size and dig out the pulp. Fill the cavity thus made with cold boiled shrimps (canned are good for the purpose). Arrange them neatly with the backs up. Line a chilled dish with endive or with lettuce leaves and set the tomatoes, within these. Or lay each upon a separate bed of the leaves on "individual" plates. In either case send around mayonnaise dressing with it in a sauce-boat.

LOBSTER SALAD.
Cut the lobster meat into neat pieces of uniform size. Set in the ice to get thoroughly chilled. Allow one third as much diced celery as you have meat. Mix these and sprinkle lightly with cayenne and salt. With a silver fork, and lightly, stir into the mixture a cupful of mayonnaise dressing. Line a chilled bowl with lettuce, fill up with the lobster and garnish with the emptied claws.

EGG SALAD.
Boil six eggs hard and leave in cold water for an hour. Remove the shells; cut into quarters, or slice, and lay upon lettuce, endive or chicory in a chilled bowl. Pour a good boiled dressing over them.

A pleasing variation of this salad and a more substantial supper dish may be made by rubbing into a cupful of mayonnaise half a cupful of canned salmon or of sardines that have been skinned and crushed into a smooth paste.

Or you may beat into the mayonnaise a tablespoonful of anchovy paste. Each device offers an agreeable variety.

TOMATO SALAD.
You may make this in half a dozen ways. The simplest is to peel the tomatoes with a keen knife; then slice and arrange upon a dish—with an underpinning of lettuce, or without—and season with fresh dressing.

Secondly—Peel and halve rich, ripe tomatoes; sprinkle lightly with salt and lay upon each half a spoonful of whipped cream. Those who have never eaten this preparation cannot guess how delicious it is.—New York Press.

FRANKLIN CHEESE STICKS.
One cup of Franklin entire wheat flour, ¼ teaspoonful of salt, 2 teaspoons of baking powder, 2 tablespoons of shortening, milk to make a stiff dough, ½ cup of grated cheese, a dash of cayenne. Sift together the flour, salt and baking powder and work in the shortening with the fingers; then add the milk. Knead slightly and roll out into a thin sheet, sprinkle one-half with the cheese and cayenne and fold the other half over. Roll very thin; cut in narrow strips and braid. Cut any desired length and bake in a moderately hot oven.

KITCHEN SHELF

To take the place of a cupboard or kitchen cabinet, a shelf, the dimensions optional to needs and space, may be used, says the Woman's Home Companion. Twelve inches wide and three to four feet long are good measurements, with either square or rounded corners. A diagonal brace support is placed at sufficient angle to allow tin covers, shallow pans, etc., to slip underneath the shelf and stand edgeways for economy in space. At the conjunction of the diagonal brace and the vertical wall brace or support, put in a "V" made of a three or four inch strip running from one brace to the other which catches and holds the edges of the utensils placed underneath, and a two-inch strip fastened half-way up the diagonal brace prevents the articles from falling out.

On the shelf proper run a one half inch strip lengthwise along the front edge to prevent dishes from slipping off. At each end of the wall brace or support bore one fourth inch holes to allow screwing shelf to the wall. The balance of the shelf can be assembled with nails, finishing nails preferred. Use nothing lighter than inch lumber. Screwing the shelf to the wall will permit its removal easily for papering, painting, etc.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

SELLS HOUSE AND GARAGE.

Charles M. Conant, broker, 640 Old South building, reports the sale of a 14-room house and garage at 58 Hammond street, Cambridge, with 5,000 square feet of land. This estate was owned by the occupant, Mrs. C. J. Stevens, and she conveys to Mrs. Katherine Evans of Boston. Terms are private.

NEW MINOT BUILDING.

Demolition of the old buildings on the site of the proposed new Minot building to be located at 105-113 Devonshire street, junction of Spring Lane and adjoining the building occupied by Kidder, Peabody & Co., is to begin on July 1 next. The contract for the new building has been awarded to the George A. Fuller Company, which is to complete the work April 1, 1912.

C. W. Whittier & Bro., agents, have leased the entire first and second floors for a long term of years to the Second National Bank of Boston, which will occupy its new quarters soon after completion of the building.

A lease has also been signed of the entire third floor to Moore & Cabot, bankers and brokers, who have been occupants of premises in the old building for many years.

JAMAICA PLAIN CHANGE.

Through the office of R. S. Barrows, the estate at 34 Alveston street, junction of Greenough avenue, Jamaica Plain, has been sold to Col. Thomas L. Livermore to Dora E., wife of Prof. William U. Wheeler of Parley Vale. The property comprises a large frame mansion house and 15,290 feet of land, all taxed on $21,200, of which $9,200 is on the land. Prof. and Mrs. Wheeler will occupy the estate next month.

CHICAGO-NEW YORK SHOWS.

Chicago's real estate show which is advertised as the "most beautiful and expensive exposition ever staged in Chicago," opens in the Coliseum Friday to run until May 7. A novel feature will be the giving away of $10,000 worth of city and suburban real estate, including an up-to-date modern bungalow, completely furnished, which is planned to build at the show. A lot of land will be given away each day.

This afternoon the doors of Madison Square Garden open for the second annual real estate and ideal homes show. A wonderful change has been wrought in the old garden in the past 72 hours, converting it from a circus arena to a miniature suburban community in the very midst of its springtime splendor. Model houses and bungalows are there, green lawns and trees, a splashing fountain and pond, flowers bursting in bloom, and gardens with the first of the season's vegetables, and even the singing of birds, so that nothing is lacking to produce the realistic effect desired.

Never before in the history of Madison Square Garden has so much money been spent on the individual exhibits of a show, and the results are apparent. Model houses, ranging from a quarter to a third the standard sizes, built of brick, concrete or wood, with every minute detail complete, are scattered here and there. The booth of one exhibitor is a pergola, hung with wisteria; another, the courtyard of an old English mansion, with its quaint potted plants.

A third is the front of a New England homestead, and you can lean over the

Stocks in Narrow Range, Closing Steady

PRICE CHANGES ARE SMALL IN TODAY'S MARKET

After Early Decline Steel Advances Well and Entire Market Steadily—Business Quiet as Usual.

COPPERS ARE FIRM

Selling of U. S. Steel in large volume was the feature of the New York market at the opening today. The stock opened at 73 1/2, declined to 73 and then improved a good fraction during the first few minutes. It was thought that in view of the unfavorable quarterly report issued by the corporation yesterday there would be some liquidation today but the declining tendency was early checked and an expected sharp break in the price averted.

Otherwise the market was somewhat irregular. Some of the active securities showed fractional improvement over last night's closing figure and others were inclined to sag off. Lake Shore 4 per cent bonds were active and higher.

Fractionally lower prices were recorded by Boston stocks at the opening, but losses were unimportant.

Steel made further advancement during the first half of the session and the entire market improved in sympathy. Reading opened unchanged at 151 1/2 and after sagging off to 151 1/4 advanced more than a point from the low. Union Pacific opened unchanged at 174 1/2 and improved about a point. General Electric was in demand. It opened up 1/4 at 132 and improved to 133 1/2 before midday. Westinghouse Electric also was strong. It opened up 1/4 at 66 1/2 and improved fractionally. Wisconsin Central was up 1/2 at 60 1/2.

On the local exchange Lake Copper opened unchanged at 20 1/2 and sold above 20. Allouez was up a point at 31. Shattuck & Arizona was up a point at 18 and sold above 20. Utah Consolidated opened unchanged at 13 1/2 and improved a good fraction. North Butte and Arizona Commercial were fractionally below last night's closing prices. United Fruit opened unchanged at 183 and rose a point.

The New York market held fairly steady during the afternoon. Advances in Erie and in Chicago and Ray Consolidated were features.

LONDON—The securities market in the late dealings moved narrowly, but covering of shorts contributed to improvement above the lowest figures. Gilt-edged investments however were an exception as they reflected no continued pressure. Home rails exhibited a tendency to rally and notwithstanding the condition of affairs in Paris foreigners and mines were harder in tone. Rubbers were excited. Americans constituted relatively the firmest feature but dealings were on a very moderate scale in that group. DeBeers closed 3-16 net lower at 189-16. Rio Tinto ended at a net loss of 1/8 at 68. The continental bourses left off quiet.

CRITICAL POLITICAL SITUATION IN FRANCE
CAUSED BY GROWERS

Vote of the Senate Inviting
Premier to Submit Bill
Ending Trouble in Grape
Districts Is New Factor.

FURTHER ATTACK
MAY BE LAUNCHED

(Special to the Monitor.)
PARIS—The action of the government resulting in the giving of instructions to the conseil d'etat to consider the question of the delimitation of the boundaries of the "champagne territory" so as to include them in the department of the Aube and other districts, which had been excluded by the decree of 1908, was undoubtedly the result of the pressure put on M. Monis by the disturbances at Troyes, and has since been the cause of a very serious debate in the Senate.

Very severe criticism was brought to bear on what had been done, and finally, to the surprise of many, a resolution was passed entirely in opposition to the government plan in favor of suppressing altogether the system of protected areas, and the government was invited by the vote of the Senate to submit as quickly as possible a bill which would put an end to all fraud in the industry and at the same time abolish the present protection system.

The political situation with regard to the above conditions has become very complicated, in fact critical. A short time ago the president of the council publicly stated that in his opinion the boundaries of the "champagne territory" has been equitably adjusted, but that under the pressure of the recent disturbance at Troyes he had given way and subsequently instructions were given to the conseil d'etat to revise the boundaries.

The character of the debate and the fact that a large majority voted in favor of the resolution, which was carried by 213 votes to 62, has opened the eyes of M. Monis to the seriousness of the situation.

It is now realized that the action of the government, in referring the question to the conseil d'Etat, which was expected to end the matter, has in fact only caused it to take a more acute form. The very fact of the acceptance by the president of the council of the form of M. Denois's resolution had the effect of destroying in advance any action that the conseil d'Etat might take and consequently of putting the ministry at once in a somewhat anomalous position.

The interests at stake in the national industry are so very great that it is believed that the government, whose present policy has veered completely round, will be unable to satisfy even many of its own supporters, and there are already signs that a new protest against its action is to be launched and supported by men of even such diverse opinions as M. Combes and M. Jean Hennessy, whose politics are as wide apart as the poles.

The whole matter is very complex, full of conflicting interests and extremely difficult of adjustment.

It has been proposed in some quarters that the question might be settled at the international congress to be held at Washington in May next for the purpose of considering and dealing with matters relating to brands and trade marks.

Such a plan would no doubt be very welcome at the moment to M. Monis and his colleagues, but it is scarcely expected that the growers themselves in the various departments would consent to it.

GUERRILLA WAR
SEEN IN ALBANIA
BY PRESS VISITOR

CONSTANTINOPLE—The only thing it is possible to say with any certainty with respect to the Albanian rising is that all news on the subject is absolutely unreliable. Both sides magnify their successes and minimize their failures to an extent which reduces such information as leaks through to pure nonsense. That after the first dash of the insurgents in the open, they have retired and adopted guerrilla tactics, seems to be fairly certain.

A correspondent of the German press, who quite recently traveled through some of the disturbed district, has declared that he rarely saw more than a dozen or so men together, and that these were manifestly employed in sniping the troops upon the march.

Should the tribes adopt an uncompromising attitude they might continue the struggle during the whole summer in this way, and this, added to the difficulties of the Turks in the Yemen, would constitute a tremendous strain on Turkish finances. With the winter, however the tribesmen would be placed at a disadvantage, as they would then be unable to return to their villages in the valleys, which would be held by the Turkish regulars.

CLOSURE IS FORCING
BILL AGAINST LORDS
THROUGH COMMONS

LONDON—The House of Commons continued its labors on the Parliament bill until early this morning.

The session was made notable by reason of the government's use of the so-called "kangaroo" closure, whereby whole pages of amendments to the bill for the curtailment of the powers of the House of Lords were skipped at the chairman's discretion.

An amendment proposing a joint session of the two houses in cases of disagreement was opposed by Mr. Asquith on the ground that such a plan would always give the House of Lords the last word in legislation, and, in his opinion, it would be impossible to devise a scheme which would not place the representative body at the mercy of the second chamber.

This amendment and another, proposing instead of a joint session a conference of 10 members from each house, were both rejected by large majorities. After this a number of amendments selected by the chairman, for the most part proposing various modifications on the delaying powers of the House of Lords, were all rejected, after the application of the closure.

Earl Winterton, Conservative member for the Horsham division of Sussex, was cautioned by the Speaker.

DISTANCES EASILY FOUND
BY NEW GRAPHIC WORLD MAP

(Special to the Monitor.)
EDINBURGH—A paper was read by Alexander Clark on "A New Graphic World Map" before the tenth meeting of the Royal Scottish Society at the society's hall, Glasgow. The subject proved to be intensely interesting.

In the course of the evening the speaker said that in constructing a map of the world there were two dimensions which it was necessary to ascertain with exactness, for the future work depended largely on these: First the length of the great circle called the equator and second the length of the circle passing through the poles.

These dimensions having been discovered, it was proposed to construct a plane figure equal in area to the surface of the globe. A scale of one inch to the 1000 miles equal to an area of 1,000,000 miles per square inch was chosen.

The major axis of the figure was made equal to the length of the equator or the circumference of the globe at the equator, and the minor axis, which divided the equator into two equal parts, was made equal to a line reaching from pole to pole, or half the circumference of the earth.

The meridian chosen as the center line is that passing through Greenwich equatorial line, and was divided into sections of 10 degrees—690.9 miles, or 690 knots, making 36 sections in all, while the central line on the map stretching from pole to pole was divided into sections of 10 degrees each making 18 sections, nine of these being to the north and nine to the south and eight to the north of the equator.

Through eight of these lines drawn to the south and eight to the north of the equator, are straight lines parallel to the equator, each of the lines corresponding to the lineal measure of the circumference of the earth at its relative distance from the equator. The ninth division at the extreme north and south represent the north and south poles.

When the ends of these parallel lines were joined the figure developed was a section of two cones with sides slightly curved from the poles and wide bell mouths joining at the equator. This figure was said to be enclosed by a sinusoidal curve and was exactly equal to the area of the earth's surface on any selected scale or in any measurement taken.

The contour of any country, ocean, island, lake, or gulf, if correctly laid down and drawn on its surface, would enclose the exact area in whatever part of the earth it was situated and could be correctly measured by the scales.

The center of meridian only is shown as a straight line, while the 10 degree

LONDON CITY CENSUS
WILL SHOW TRAFFIC
DURING BUSY HOURS

(Special to the Monitor.)

LONDON—The city of London, which is of course the busiest and most crowded part of the capital during the day, is almost deserted after business hours, when the thousands of workers have returned to their homes, and the corporation has decided to have a census taken next Friday, which is to comprise the day population of the city, and the huge traffic that passes through it.

The chief census officer has pointed out that as far as the city is concerned the recent general census will be found to be very misleading, giving as it probably will, the population as about 20,000 persons without perhaps a single banker being included, and this certainly seems to justify the city in having a census of its own.

As regards the traffic, experiments of an interesting nature were recently made by the authorities. On London bridge, for instance, in the course of an hour, between 8:30 and 9:30 a. m., enumerators noted 15,968 ordinary pedestrians, a further 900 pushing barrows besides 5899 persons in vehicles.

On the other hand they counted only 696 foot passengers on Southwark bridge in addition to 77 persons in 77 vehicles. On the Embankment in the space of half an hour taxicabs and motor cars totaled 228.

It is estimated that there are 50 ways by which vehicles can enter the city, a further 14 whereby only pedestrians can enter, two stairways leading from the river, the 23 railway and "tube" stations.

CANADA LUMBER
MEN ASK REPEAL
OF CARRIERS' ACT

ST. JOHN, N. B.—Lumbermen of the Maritime provinces are sending a strong delegation to Ottawa to ask for the repeal of a section of the Canadian water carriers act which relieves ship owners from responsibility in case of loss or destruction of cargo.

Under the legislation passed last year, lumber shippers here are unable to get a clean bill of lading and the buyers in Europe and other world markets refuse to accept the lumber unless a surveyor is sent from the shipping ports to tally the cargo at its destination. This cannot be done for any less than 30 cents a thousand feet, and to the lumbermen in New Brunswick alone this would mean an annual charge of $90,000.

This sum represents a large portion of the profit and commission on which the middleman, or lumber shipper, exists. The delegates who will appear before the federal Parliament will argue that the clause discriminates against Canada and makes the business of shipping lumber to distant countries almost impracticable.

ST. JOHN CARRIES COMMISSION FORM

ST. JOHN, N. B.—The commission form of government could not have had a much stronger endorsement than that given at the polls by the electors when a popular majority of 2246 was recorded at the plebiscite just held in conjunction with the aldermanic elections. The result was: For 3893, against 1647.

The plebiscite on the harbor bridge was also carried by a large majority and the city council is now committed to the policy of contributing $300,000 toward the construction of a bridge across St. John harbor from the west side, the other two thirds to be made up by the provincial and Dominion governments.

COUNT APPONYI IS NOMINATED TO UNIVERSITY POST

BUDAPEST—Count Albert Apponyi, who returned recently from the United States, has been nominated professor of political science at the University at Budapest.

His nomination has given rise to considerable discussion in the newspapers and his opponents consider that although he ranks as a good politician he is not qualified to fill the position of a university professor of political science.

It has always been necessary for professors at universities to set forth the subjects they teach in book form. The Hungarian count has, however, not been compelled to do this, since his nomination is entirely due to political influence.

REICHSTAG PROGRAM
SEEN AS OVER FULL
AS ELECTION NEARS

(Special to the Monitor.)

BERLIN—Following the example of the Reichstag and the lower house, the upper house has now closed for the vacation, which in the case of the "Herrnhäuser" will be a very long one.

As to how the Reichstag will manage to get through the long program awaiting it before the general elections is being discussed by every one. The Alsace-Lorraine constitution, the imperial insurance regulations, the draft of the penal laws and other important matters are far from being settled, and a settlement is impossible within the four weeks between Easter and Whitsuntide.

It is not improbable that the House may have an autumn session in view of the amount of work to be got through, but with the elections so near at hand, it is improbable that much serious work will be accomplished.

The Liberal parties are doing all in their power to make a stand for the Reichstag electorate for Alsace-Lorraine. That system once having been introduced there, Prussia would be obliged to follow as a matter of course. The Conservatives are naturally exerting all their strength and influence to oppose this proposal and the fight will be keen.

OTTAWA, Ont.—The opposition in the Dominion House is endeavoring to hold back the reciprocity agreement until the United States Senate has accepted or rejected the pact. Delay is thus explained.

COST OF CORONATION
PROCESSION SEATS
RUNS HIGH IN PLACES

Sudden Line of Bonfires and Bouquets of Rockets Will Mark Welcome of Nation to Newly Crowned King.

GREATER BRITAINS
SEND THEIR TROOPS

(Special to the Monitor.)

LONDON—Enormous prices are being asked for front seats on stands to view the coronation procession. Agents are busy disposing of these seats already.

Seats in the windows which command a good view of the route are fetching as much as 10 guineas ($52) each, while for a balcony or for large rooms with windows accommodating 30 people or so as much as 400 guineas ($2100) has been asked. In other cases it is not unusual to hear of £200 or £300 being asked for a single room with several windows.

The shops which line the route will have the windows removed to accommodate stands which can be built inside them. It is only in very favored positions that these enormous prices are being demanded, for the route taken by the royal procession covers more ground than usual and provides space for many thousands more seats in consequence. In the Strand, for instance, seats commanding excellent views are being sold at 5 guineas apiece.

One firm alone is erecting stands with a total seating capacity for about 50,000 people. Some of these seats are being sold at 2 guineas each and some in less favored positions can be had for 1 guinea.

On June 29, the date fixed for the luncheon at the Guildhall, the seats will be sold for considerably less than on the day of the coronation. It is customary on these occasions for the rush for seats to come in the last few weeks preceding the date of the procession, but it is reported that already the seats in the big stand to be erected in St. Marys, the Strand, are nearly all sold out. The London streets are being defaced by piles of wood arriving for the construction of the stands that will shortly be erected along the route of the procession.

Preparations are going ahead in all quarters, and the news comes from Gravesend that the mayor is making an attempt to secure the presence of one of the Japanese vessels in the port during the coronation. These vessels are now on their way to Dover, and they will meet and form an escort to the Japanese prince, who is going to represent the Emperor of Japan at the coronation.

At Guildford it is proposed to plant two coronation trees, and great festivities are being inaugurated for the amusement of the town on coronation day, which will close with a torchlight procession and a bonfire lighted on Pewley hill.

Contingents of overseas dominion troops that will be in London for the coronation have been invited by the dean of St. Pauls to attend a service at the cathedral on Waterloo day, June 18.

It is expected that the inhabitants of London will turn out in large numbers to give a hearty welcome to the colonial troops as they march along the streets to the city. The African contingents are due to arrive at Southampton on June 11, while the Canadians will probably have landed a few days previously at Liverpool.

The fellows of the Zoological Society have placed at the disposal of the entertainments committee tickets of admission to their gardens for the overseas troops on Sunday afternoons. This kindness is greatly appreciated by the entertainments committee and will give great pleasure to the visitors.

Bonfire arrangements are going ahead with great vigor. All bonfires are to be lighted at a given hour, and a bouquet of rockets is to be sent up from each point simultaneously. The strains of the national anthem will echo round the British Isles after the bonfires are alight.

Hints for the successful construction of these bonfires are being sent out. On inaccessible heights where it would be found difficult to carry the kindling it is proposed to burn a flare light. One of these was burned on the occasion of the diamond jubilee on Coniston Old Man and was deemed a great success, making as it did a brilliant star of light.

The London country council have appointed a committee to propose and carry out a scheme for the decoration of Westminster bridge. It is believed that a triumphal arch of a medieval character will be thrown across the bridge, under which the King and Queen will pass on their return from the royal progress on June 23.

There is to be a Shakespeare ball at the Albert hall on June 20, for which quadrille parties are being quickly made up. "Henry VIII," "Troilus and Cressida" and "Henry VII." are among the plays which will be represented. To view this ball the boxes in the grand tier are being sold for 200 guineas ($1000), while the second and third tier boxes are fetching prices ranging from 100 to 20 guineas.

CROWN PRINCE GETS POPULAR WELCOME
ON ENTERING BERLIN

(Special to the Monitor.)

BERLIN—The return of the crown prince and princess from their travels was the signal for the display of much public rejoicing.

Every station where the long train of Austrian court coaches stopped was crowded with cheering throngs, and enthusiasm reached its height when their imperial highnesses came to the window obviously delighted at their welcome.

At Potsdam the Princes Eitel and August met their brother, and the Kaiserin's sister, Princess Friedrich Leopold, was also there with her daughter, the greetings being very affectionate.

As they motored to the Marble palace they were enthusiastically cheered by thousands of people who lined the way, for both the prince and his wife are remarkably popular.

At the palace the three little sons met their parents with flowers in their hands, the traditional German greeting to any one returning home after a journey.

AUSTRALIAN PENNY
POSTAGE INNOVATION
TO HAVE WIDE RANGE

(Special to the Monitor.)

MELBOURNE, Victoria.—The announcement of the introduction of penny postage in Australia has aroused the greatest interest, and it is understood that South Africa, Canada, New Zealand, Great Britain, India, and Egypt will also benefit by the measure.

With respect to the question of the cost to the commonwealth, the estimated amount that it would cost each state was given as follows: New South Wales £62,000, Queensland £28,000, South Australia £24,000, West Australia £20,000, Tasmania £16,000 and Victoria £10,000.

In September last when the treasurer announced the proposed introduction of the penny postage, he said in reply to a question as to what the estimated annual loss of revenue would be, that it would not exceed £600,000 ($3,000,000), a sum almost four times larger than that quoted three years previously.

It is generally considered, however, that this figure will soon be reduced and eventually wiped out by the great increase in the correspondence that will result from the introduction of the measure.

FAIR VISTAS FRAMED IN COLONNADES

THIS cut of the postoffice at Kingston, Jamaica, is architecturally interesting and shows, too, the progress of things in the island city. The postoffice was located formerly on Harbor street but this new building is on King street, extending from Barry to Laws street. It is made of concrete and has some space of green lawn in front. The loggia with the open space atop and the upper loggias are types of architecture to which all southern building tends. These colonnaded spaces above must frame in charming pictures of the sea and the pleasant country near the city—at least the northern observer hopes that Kingston is not so big as to hold its charming surroundings at arm's length.

Speaking of loggias and such, one is reminded of the most famous and lordly city of Florence, where busy streets lined with shops speak sufficiently of urban doings, but where nevertheless by mounting to the upper stories in almost any building such views may be had of the exquisite Italian environs of this stately city as to make one think the whole place laid out by the most deliberative plans of a landscape gardener, instead of having grown there in the spontaneous processes of civic demands. Undoubtedly the wonderful setting of Florence, in the Tuscan hills with snow-capped mountains beyond, must have contributed largely to the high development of artistic taste in the community. Let us today therefore welcome all civic effort to make beauty appear and congratulate Kingston on the new government building.

The Marshall Field & Co. Choral Society of Chicago, which was organized in 1907, with the object of acquiring a greater knowledge of music and to facilitate a greater cooperation of the employees of Marshall Field & Co. in general, gave its annual concert before an appreciative audience. The first part of the program was devoted to Coleridge-Taylor's "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast," and after the intermission Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise" was rendered by the Marshall Field contingent, assisted by Mabel Sharp Herdian, soprano; Rose Lutiger Gannon, contralto; and Evan Williams, tenor.—Musical Courier.

Dukas and Debussy

Debussy is an impressionist; Dukas is so only in a limited sense. Debussy paints a canvas of merging and blending colors, indefinite in line; Dukas limns a picture polychromatic, too, but as finely penciled in its melodic substance as an etching. Debussy seeks deliberately the vague and nebulous; Dukas aims at perfect clarity and sharpness of detail. Debussy has shown no fondness for polyphonic effects; Dukas is a master of thematic weaving. Debussy is all repression; Dukas at times creates overpowering orchestral climaxes.

It would be difficult, indeed, to find two musicians of the same nationality who were subjected to much the same influences more different than Debussy and Dukas. It is as incorrect to say Dukas is a follower of Debussy as to say Reger is a disciple of Strauss.—New York Press.

Pride and generosity are often founded. There are many who give who are too proud to withhold.—Henry Seton Merriman.

Origin of Menu Cards

It is not always that useful ideas are traceable to their first appearance, but the following statement from the London Globe is at any rate a plausible explanation of how order began to be in table service:

At a dinner given by Duke Henry of Brunswick in 1541 he was seen to every now and then consult a long slip of paper which he held in his hand. He explained that it was a sort of program or catalogue of the dishes he had commanded from the cook. "To the intent that if some delicacy, which especially appealed to his appetite, were marked for a later stage in the repast, he might carefully reserve his appetite for it." The simplicity and utility of the idea at once took the fancy of the duke's convives, and the menu card from that moment became an institution. The new fashion was so much admired it traveled far and near, and was adopted in England and France at once.

And Then—What Happened Then? Messenger Boys Have Play

I heard of a spider who wanted to fly; He had no wings, but he thought he'd try. It looked so easy; so he climbed up high. And then—

What happened then? There came by a bird, who got his eye On this very spider who wanted to fly. "I'll watch this spider," he said; "may-be I—"

And then— What happened then? Well, the spider jumped, as spiders do, Forgetting to fly; the bird, he knew, Might eat him up in a minute or two. And then—

What happened then? The bird was scared by a cat in the tree, Who had climbed up there, as still as could be. Saying, "That bird shall make a meal for me." And then—

What happened then? Why, the bird flew away to another tree; The cat crawled down, as meek as could be; And the spider gave up flying, you see; And so—

Nothing happened then. —Mrs. R. E. Clark in St. Nicholas.

How a Woman Got Her Way

A writer in the New York Globe tells of a young woman who, he believes, is not inferior to any man in the management of the affairs of life. She bought a small farm, and was busy overseeing the work on it.

The other day she ordered a telephone installed, and the company's workmen started in. Presently the "boss" called her out to the lawn.

"We can't run the wire in without damaging that tree," he said, pointing to a fine old elm near the piazza. "It can't be done."

"Very well," replied the young woman, smiling, "then you needn't put in the phone," and she reentered the house.

"Did the electricians go away?" asked the correspondent, who assuredly believes that a man should think twice before insisting upon his boasted mental superiority to the other sex.

"No, sir. They put in the phone—and without harming the tree."

"A man, now," he concludes, "would have argued a half-hour over the matter."

Failure of Flaps

A certain skeptic was contending before a minister that the works of creation are manifestly imperfect. "Have you not yourself," he asked, "noted defects in the human organism, for instance, and thought of better contrivances?" To his delight there was the frank reply, "Why yes, I really think I have." "In what respect?" "Why," drawled the parson, "you see, when I want to shut out anything disagreeable from my sight, I can draw down my eyelids, and it's all done, but, unfortunately, I haven't any flaps to my ears." Free conversation ceased at about that point.—The Christian Guardian.

A quiet, patient heart that meekly serves the Lord,

DIVINE LOVE

A WONDERFUL secret is made plain to faithful seekers for God, wonderful, simple, but still a secret to dull mortality. Where shall words be found to tell it? How shall one name the Love that is revealed to the broken and contrite heart? to the thought cleansed for the hour of selfish desires and lifted utterly to God? Love is God's dearest name, yet how lightly this name is taken on the lips of mortals! Who dares when he speaks of a human affection to lift it into the higher term? Yet if we truly have Love with us, we have God.

When the Love who is God is consciously with us we are sure of Him. We know that divine Love is and is to be enjoyed here and now. Love is the sum and substance of being. The Love that is divine is constant in quality and this quality is recognized at once when God is recognized. We are aware of the presence of divine and holy Being. This Love is synonymous with Life and with Mind, perfect Mind which does not know imperfection. Because this Love is Life its coming heals the sick, transforming the human sense of life in matter to some present realization of Life as Spirit. Because it is Mind it has no sense of material personality. It is pure of sense.

The Love that is God then is not only greater and purer than the human sense of love, but different in quality, in essence, and this is a point which should be better understood. The phrase "divine Love" sets Love apart from human affections just as the name gold sets a coin apart from paper. The gold is always gold, always itself, and it has the full value in itself of the coin's denomination. The paper is worthless except as it is accepted in lieu of the gold. This material analogy serves only as a shadowy hint of the great fact that real Love is something absolutely different from a mortal belief of love. He who overcomes and walks for a time in the conscious presence of divine Love enters a new world.

Perhaps what most plainly marks the dividing line between real Love, God, infinite divine Mind, and the human emotion or belief of love is selfishness. Human love is often intense in proportion to its selfishness; looms larger in consciousness in proportion to its limitations. Human love resents the very intimacy of a universal love. Human love actually says that he who loves more than a few must necessarily love lightly. Human love finds a mother unnatural, no mother, who could love another child as much as she loves her own. But the quality of divine Love is universality. The aim of the present writing is to insist on this point: that divine Love is something which comes through revelation to human consciousness, exactly as spiritual understanding comes. It does not destroy human love, any more than the coming of spiritual understanding destroys human intelligence; but even as spiritual understanding shows human intelligence how to choose the better part and to abandon one by one mistaken things, so divine Love entering the human heart teaches it how to purify human affections.

Divine Love shows often with a great shock to satisfied mortals, how much self-seeking there is in many a would-be noble and heroic affection. Mortals labor to support their homes, but as men learn that divine Love is home the human ideal of a happy home becomes something far higher than a place of selfish shelter and comfort and mutual admiration. It is now a place where the family gathers to worship God and to exemplify Him at all times. This at once sets the door open to all who may come seeking divine Love. Divine Love shows the mother how God loves her child. Now her sense of personal possession in the child is exchanged for the happiness of knowing herself privileged to reflect the immediate providence and care of divine Love, to the child.

Human love seems to rise in one human heart and to be directed by personal

A second man I honour, and still more highly; him who is seen toiling for the spiritually indispensable; not daily bread, but the bread of life.—Carlyle.

VICISSITUDES OF BIBLE TRANSLATIONS

WHEN we praise the glory of King James' English as it is made known to us in the pages of our English Bible, we are prone to forget that the title page reads, "With the former translations diligently compared and revised." Wyckliffe (1378), Tyndale (1525), Coverdale (1536) and the Great Bible (1539) are its immediate predecessors, with the Geneva Bible (1560), which was dearer than the Great Bible (chained in the churches by Henry VIII.) in the affections of the English people and which of them all seems most like the authorized version.

The Great Bible, once the authorized version of the English nation, is virtually Tyndale's Bible, the book of which his enemies had said that it should never be the Bible of England. Myles Coverdale put forth a translation after Tyndale, depending largely on his predecessor's "interpretation," as it was called, meaning his translation. Matthew's Bible came out in 1537, really prepared by John Rogers, martyr (celebrated by the way, in the little old New England First Primer). This was Tyndale's Bible straight, except the last half of the Old Testament, which was taken from Coverdale. In it the Song of Solomon is called "Solomon's Ballades."

Twenty years later the entry of Queen Elizabeth into London was marked by a great procession. It has just arrived at the "little conduit in Chepe" (see J. Paterson Smyth's "How We Got Our Bible") where one of those pageants was prepared that delighted the hearts of an older England. A man in emblematic dress stands forth before the Queen and tells her he is Time. Beside him is a white-robed maiden, who is Truth. She holds in her hands a book on which is written, "verbum veritatis," the Word of Truth. This she presents to the Queen. Elizabeth raises it to her lips and, laying it against her heart, amid the shouting of the many, thanks the city for so precious a gift.

This promised well for the future of the Bible, which had been almost a closed book during Mary's reign. Still more significant was the present return of the Reformers from Geneva, whither they had fled during Mary's reign. They brought the famous Geneva Bible, with the name of Theo. de Beze on the title page, and the Queen accepted the dedication to her.

Taverner's Bible was an edition of Matthew's, with the polemical notes toned down. But none of the versions was fully satisfactory and so the Great Bible came to be. Coverdale was sent to Paris with the King's printer. His work was interfered with by the authorities, so that he had to return to England, with all his printing presses and types and printers, to complete the work there. It was published in April, 1539, and was "authorized to be used and frequented in every church in the kingdom." The psalms in the Episcopal prayer book and other parts of the service are taken unchanged from the great Bible. Certain doubtful texts were indicated in fine type, like the passage in I John v. 7 and 8, which has been entirely omitted, by the way, from the recent Revised Version. This is the celebrated "Breeches Bible," as it was afterward called, from the rendering in Gen. iii. 7, of "breeches" for "aprons." It may be noted here that the American Revised Version gives the marginal reading of "girdles" in this passage made so notable by that one early edition of the Geneva Bible. "Breeches" was also Wycliffe's version.

This book used the Roman type in place of the old troublesome black letter of the Great Bible, it was less cumbersome, and had marginal notes. It omitted the name of St. Paul from the epistle to the Hebrews.

The Bishop's Bible was yet a third translation that had support of ecclesiastical authority. To bring one single authorized version to existence, then, was the notable work of King James' reign. All former Bibles, even the Bibles of other European tongues, were studied as well as the Greek and Hebrew and every effort was made to express the meanings in clear, idiomatic English. This produced the splendid authorized version, the great masterpiece of the English tongue.

The Revised Version of 1881-83 used manuscripts and other sources not open to the revisers of 1611. English scholars of various theological views met in the Jerusalem chamber in Westminster abbey. An American committee was also at work, and their changes were sent to England. But so many changes by the American committee were rejected by the English that the American scholars kept on diligently with their study and at last, A. D. 1901, the first year of the twentieth century, the "Standard American Edition of the Revised Version of the Bible" was set forth.

On the Trail of the Emerald

Emerald ranks close to the diamond in hardness. It exceeds the diamond in value, perfect emeralds bringing $150 a karat. The sparkling green jewel is rare; therefore it is prized highly.

At the southern extremity of California an emerald hunt has been on for five years, says the World Today. Prospectors in San Diego county, close to the Mexican border, are hot on its trail. They have found beryl of all colors; pale blue beryl, its hues rippling like the sheen of the ocean's blue, pink beryl, yellowish beryl, beryl of all tints except one. They have not yet found the grass-green beryl, the true emerald of their dreams, but they are on its trail, hopefully hunting.

The blue and the pink beryl sell for $12 a karat. Green beryl—emerald—is cheap at 10 times this price. And a karat is not large. A hundred thousand dollars worth of emeralds could be carried easily by a small child, hidden in a very small bag. A small pocket of green beryl lying in a vein underneath a wall of rock would make the finder wealthy.

They dream of emerald pockets out there on the border of tumultuous Mexico. The emerald's green luster haunts them, drives them into the hills, into the desert, on the eager quest. Some day, perhaps, the dream will come true, the blow of the pick will lay bare a nest of the sparkling gems that have been the goal of all prospectors since the first precious stones were found in the San Diego hills nine years ago.

Putting the Cart Before the Horse

If your name happens to be John Smith and you lived in Hungary, you would sign yourself "Smith John." Queer, isn't it? And according to no less an authority than Paulo Gruppe, the gifted Dutch cellist, Hungary is the only country in Europe that the curious custom of placing the surname before the given name prevails. Arriving for his first visit in Buda Pesth, where he was to play in concert, Mr. Gruppe was amazed to see himself billed on posters as "The Great Gruppe Paulo." "Typographical error," exclaimed the vexed musician, and he rushed to the concert hall to see the manager, about the mistake, but when the latter explained, Mr. Gruppe was pacified. —Musical Courier.

It is sublime to feel and say of another, I need never meet, or speak, or write to him; we need not reinforce ourselves, or send tokens of remembrance; I rely on him as on myself; if he did thus or thus, I know it was right. —Emerson.

American and British Labor

AN INVESTIGATION recently carried on by the British board of trade into American labor conditions, judging from the summary that has been given to the press, bears the stamp of characteristic thoroughness. The purpose of the inquiry was to obtain the facts. Whether the facts collected are favorable or unfavorable from a British point of view, they are presented with equal freedom and for what they may be worth. England acts under free trade, the United States under protection. England throws her ports wide open to raw and manufactured materials alike; the United States is a producer of raw and manufactured materials, and has only recently displayed a disposition to deal liberally with the raw and manufactured products of other countries. The high protective tariff of the United States has been defended for years on the ground that it means higher compensation than European nations grant, or are able to grant, to the workman. The inquiry carried on by the British board of trade shows that labor is better paid in the United States than in Great Britain, but it fails to reveal a very remarkable difference between the conditions of American and British labor when all things are taken into account.

It is shown by the summary referred to that, while the American workman must pay a higher price than his British brother for everything he needs, he still has a wider margin, over and above all expenses, to save or to spend on non-essentials. The agents who prosecuted the investigation made an analysis of social statistics of twenty-eight representative industrial towns and cities east of the Mississippi, "this section being chosen as containing features more nearly approximate to those of the United Kingdom." The expense accounts of between 7000 and 8000 families were examined and analyzed, and, taking the prices current at the time, it was found that the British housewife could have bought for $3.27 articles of food which would have cost an American housewife $4.69. Fuel and gas are also higher in this country than in Great Britain; so is short distance transportation.

On the whole, it is conceded that labor conditions are better in this country than in Great Britain; but it does not appear, either from this report or from other data on the subject, that the conditions are so much better here as to justify the means employed to maintain prices at another level.

THE armistice may prove so agreeable to everybody in Mexico as to make the demand for its indefinite continuance unanimous.

Japan and the Canal

JAPAN is eyeing the progress of the Panama canal with pleasant thoughts of what that waterway will mean in the development of her trade with this country, Central and South America and the world. Probably the question of whether the canal should be fortified, around which controversy has been waged, is of secondary moment to Japan. Although she is still a military rather than an industrial nation, everything points to a gradual reversal of those conditions, and Nippon is keen to appreciate the tremendous advantages certain to result when her ships are enabled to reach the east coasts of North and South America without making the long and difficult voyage around the Horn or crossing from Europe.

It is no wonder that the Japanese editors, therefore, are becoming enthusiastic. They foresee in the new waterway the key to their country's possible commercial development on a scale that will make her past accomplishments of that nature seem insignificant. After 1915 Japanese vessels will find it practicable to cross to the Pacific coast ports of America, pass through the Panama canal and the Caribbean sea, up into the gulf of Mexico and thence along the Atlantic coast of the United States and Canada. Afterward they may find it profitable to cross the Atlantic to Europe and make their way home by way of the Suez canal.

Thus, the Panama canal will do away in many instances with the necessity for return ships of merchant vessels and furnish the one link required to make world commerce an endless procession. This prospect undoubtedly means more proportionately to Japan than to any of the larger nations, except China. It is of so much importance to Japan that, in great part, her attention will doubtless be fixed on the problem of increasing her industrial efficiency until her manufactured goods are on the same plane of quality as those of other countries. The Panama canal, by encouraging globe circumnavigation, will bring the Japanese into closer competition with the skilled craftsmen of the world at large. For their own industrial protection, it would seem that they must henceforth attach even greater importance to the arts of peace.

COMMISSION government has reduced the cost of governing Birmingham, Ala., by $74,000 a year. Moreover, it gives better government for less money.

A Jewish Outpost

IT is among the possibilities, at least, that the efforts to plant extensive Jewish colonies in the east have been rendered futile by reason of the ambitious character of the schemes. Instead of appealing to the Turkish government, the extensive plans of the Zionists have tended rather to create alarm in that quarter. A movement now under way, having for its object the settlement of a district, at Rapha, near Gaza, by reason of its comparatively modest character, promises to be successful. It is recalled in this connection that when, in 1903, Dr. Herzl, after repeated efforts, was finally compelled to abandon hope of obtaining a concession from Turkey suitable to the demands of the Zionist movement, he turned to Egypt, apparently with better success. The Egyptian government, at all events, agreed to grant land for a Jewish settlement in El Arish, a district lying between Egypt and Palestine. This tract was situated within an isosceles triangle, one side extending from the east of the Suez canal to Akabah, the coast forming the base. Investigation by a commission appointed by the Zionist leaders for the purpose, however, revealed the fact that, save over limited and detached areas, the land was not suitable for colonization. On the strength of the report of this commission the project was abandoned.

The General Jewish Colonizing Organization, nevertheless, seems to have kept this tract, or portions of it, under consideration, and for the purposes of the new colony 10,000 acres are to be set aside. An option has been obtained upon another tract of the same area. By experiment it has been determined that almonds, figs, olives, mulberry trees, eucalyptus, castor and cactus will flourish on this land. There is also the belief that grapes may be cultivated with success. The tract opens upon a harbor, and has many advantages over the Jewish colonies at present scattered throughout the near east. Historically, the territory is supposed to embrace a portion of the land of the Hittites.

The colony still falls short of the Zionist ideal in that it will not be in Palestine, but close to it. It should be regarded, however, as an encouraging extension of the Jewish outpost. If the ideal cannot be immediately attained, a step toward its attainment should not be undervalued. The success of Jewish colonies along the borders of Palestine must inevitably lead in time to the establishment of Jewish colonies across the line. It would seem that the General Jewish Colonizing Organization is proceeding wisely, if quietly. Turkey, noting the prosperity of the Jewish settlements, and recognizing the fact that the colonies are composed of a peaceable and orderly people, may before long come to the point of voluntarily proffering the concessions it has been so long withholding.

THE new national song is said to start out with the question: "Canst be that thou insensate art?" This is addressed to the flag, and it is not difficult to see that the flag will have to give it up.

CONTINENTAL travelers all too frequently consider the city of Hamburg in the light of a gateway to localities which, like Munich, Dresden, Paris, Berlin or Vienna, are enjoying reputations long established. It is only within recent years that Americans abroad have begun to give somewhat closer attention to the great German city, that is not only the most important seaport on the continent, but, in matters artistic, closely approaches the best to be found in Europe. Hamburg, in fact, has been so busy rising to its present commercial supremacy that it has neglected to tell the world that its ambition to be termed a city beautiful has been scarcely less pronounced within its domestic circle than its aim to lead in business. The municipal activities of Hamburg, however, have been so far reaching that at the present time few cities have more to offer visitors than this old Hansa town.

One of the oldest cities in Germany, Hamburg retains much of the quaint architecture of the past. But modern construction is exemplified by many hotels, apartment houses and residences that vie with the finest of their kind abroad. The street-planning system is considered typical of the best. Tree planting continues as a part of the ambitious program of the municipality. Many beautiful parks abound. Perhaps one of the greatest show places of Hamburg, however, is the Zoological garden, which doubtless owes its size and completeness in part to the fact that vessels from all corners of the world have been able to discharge their animal cargoes right at the door of the city. The tourist who takes time to visit Hamburg will find in the zoo many animals duplicated in no other collection of the kind.

At last awakening to its tourist opportunities, Hamburg is now preparing to put its best foot forward. Communities, seemingly less well equipped, have found that publicity brings the crowds, but that the municipality has to give visitors their money's worth or they will not only not come again, but may induce others to remain away. Hamburg need not hesitate to let its light shine, for it has something worth showing.

CHICAGO's postal employees are naturally among those most pleased by the new street-numbering system which facilitates memorizing localities.

Silk Hats in Texas

AT FIRST thought it may seem a trifle strange that, as William E. Curtis points out, the silk hat should have so many warm adherents and admirers in Texas, that is, a trifle strange to westerners and easterners. It will not appear so strange to southerners; for not alone Texas but the entire South has a leaning, and a strong one, toward the tile. There is an impression in the North that Texans never under any circumstances wear their sombreros; that the average southerner never lays aside his wide-brimmed slouch. Nothing could be farther from the fact. The southerner wears a soft hat for comfort, but he almost invariably wears a silk hat for dress.

In Texas it is easy and natural to imagine that there are circumstances under which a silk hat would be inconvenient and uncomfortable. Texans never wear silk hats, for instance, when riding bronchos or mustangs around their ranches. It is a custom universally observed in Texas to discard the silk hat when breaking the soil, harrowing, sowing and harvesting. You will not find many Texans in town wearing silk hats at midday. But, when the day's labor is done and the Texan saunters forth of an evening, he does not feel quite comfortable unless he has on a silk hat, and one that is either new or recently blocked.

It follows, as day follows night, that when the Texan dons a silk hat he also puts on a frock coat. A frock coat calls for a light waistcoat, a pair of striped trousers and patent leather shoes. Then there is the simple flower in the buttonhole, the gloves clasped carelessly in the left hand, the cane swinging lightly from the right, and, take it altogether, you would hardly recognize the Texan of the evening as the shirt-sleeved, sombrero-crowned Texan of the morning.

It is really a pleasing thing that Texas and, for that matter, the entire South, clings to the silk hat with all of its accompaniments. It makes for dignity. It is a protest against the utilitarianism and commercialism of the period. It helps to lift man out of the commonplace. A few silk hats scattered along the principal thoroughfare of any town or city not only relieve the monotony and give picturesqueness to the scene, but diffuse an atmosphere that helps to raise the community above the mediocre, and does more to advance its credit and sell its bonds than asphaltum pavements and steel skeleton office buildings.

A United States Museum

THE report in a recent despatch that J. P. Morgan's representatives would attend the sale of the Hoe collection, and the surmise that, in behalf of that gentleman, they might buy the whole or a part of it brings once more to our attention the fact that in the United States there is nothing similar to the British Museum, and the further fact that, even if there were, the private collector of great riches can usually outbid any government or its agents. The Hoe collection consists of books and manuscripts, some of which are of very great value, in the sense not that rich men have been or are willing to give vast sums for them but that aside from any price obtaining in a market much overstimulated by a not too intelligent competition, these things of themselves possess a great literary and historic value that serves at once as monument and as means of education. There is, for instance, in the collection the Gutenberg Bible printed on vellum in 1450-55; its cost to the last buyer was bound to be high, but that does not make it valuable, though it may make it expensive. Its real value lies in the fact that it is a monument in the great art of printing and a model of splendid work for craftsmen to follow. It is a model of good workmanship, and of this men everywhere stand always in need. Of a different value but of great importance are Americana, such rare books, pamphlets and manuscripts as have to do with the historic development of the United States. It is no extravagance to say that the place for such things is in a national repository, there to be cherished by the people's government, for the people. In the meantime, and in the absence of an institution like the British Museum, such treasures find their way into the cabinets of private collectors or of museums that, however excellent and however generously maintained, must be, from the nature of things, more or less local in character.

In a day when the federal government reaches toward a supervision of the private citizens in matters ranging from the categorical imperative to mustard plasters, it seems as though, without much trenching on the individual's rights or his just preferences, the national legislature might dignify its billions by devoting some of their constituent millions to the institution of a great and national collection of objects that would alike instruct them that had much to learn and help those that had learned to add to their store for the benefit of the people at large. One argument at least for a national museum could be made: it would not exist for the benefit of a class but for the benefit of all. We are quite ready to admit the merits of the congressional library, and we realize that it is a necessity; we would not urge the federal government to devote itself to the collection of anything that would not have the standing of a treasure and the use of teaching; but when one reflects upon the great sums that are poured out of the federal treasury upon objects that do not always vindicate themselves, one cannot but confess that the United States has attained a point of dignity in population and some sorts of achievement where the institution of a national museum would be practical and becoming and would do a benefit far more widespread than that flowing from some projects undertaken by or proposed to the national government.

GAVELS are still being presented to Speaker Clark, apparently at the rate of at least one a day. Most of them are made of hard and rare woods. Does not this show that the movement for the conservation of the forests needs to be given fresh impetus?

COMPLETION of the railroad monopoly in New England of late has obscured to some extent the progress of a certain undertaking that may strongly affect the future of both St. John, N. B., and Boston. Significance attaches to the announcement that the Aroostook Valley Railroad Company has secured charter rights covering a continuous electric line from tidewater at St. John directly across the province of New Brunswick to Andover parish on the St. John river; from there to Presque Isle and Washburn, Me., and thence west across Maine and three counties in Quebec to the Quebec bridge over the St. Lawrence river. The company already has an electric line in operation between the Canadian Pacific yard in Presque Isle and the village of Washburn, and it sought last January to acquire the Canadian Pacific line and franchises between Presque Isle and Aroostook Junction, N. B. It was intimated then that the Canadian Pacific was the real owner of the Aroostook Valley company, in which event the direct line from Quebec to St. John would bring that port and St. Andrews much nearer to the wheat country of the great Canadian northwest.

With such a line, having two outlets on the Atlantic coast, the Canadian Pacific would be in a position to offer quicker transportation from the northwest to tidewater than either the Grand Trunk or the New Haven-Boston & Maine; and it has an additional advantage in owning a line of steamers operating between St. John and this port. Mr. Mellen, by acquiring the Rutland, has connected Boston with the Great lakes by way of Ogdensburg; but if freight had to be transported around over the Ogdensburg & Lake Champlain division, it must travel almost northeast, then easterly across New York state, swing over into Vermont and come south over the Rutland and the Boston & Maine into this city, a long and difficult route. Both the Ogdensburg division and the Rutland are single-track railroads, and their junction facilities are not of the best. The Grand Trunk's Portland and Providence terminal possibilities make this outlook not entirely plain, so far as Boston is concerned; and the Aroostook Valley railroad plans, together with the work the Canadian Pacific has been doing recently to improve the port of St. Andrews, are of particular interest at this time.

Mr. Mellen hinted recently at a prospective closer understanding with the Canadian railroads. Could he, by any possibility, have meant the Canadian Pacific? It is unthinkable that he referred to the Grand Trunk. The New Haven understanding with the Bangor & Aroostook evidently did not prevent the Aroostook Valley from acquiring all the necessary franchise rights, and the New England railroad monopoly cannot prevent the Canadian Pacific from developing St. John and St. Andrews in case it plans to do so and has acquired the right of way across Maine. In that event, perhaps, Boston might see less real promise in the New Haven monopoly than now appears. The question is whether the Aroostook Valley line is a mask for the Canadian Pacific and, if so, what effect that fact may have on the promised heavy traffic between Boston and the Canadian northwest.
